Shømrocket 1970

Ruth,

It was a pleasure working with you in several phases of school life - speech, creative writing and drama. I was very proud of you in the American Legion Contest. You strongly persisted throughout, even though the competition became pretty stiff. It is not nearly as important that you win but that you know you tried as hard as possible and did your best. It is more important that the world be full of people who try and try and try and never give up than to be full of winners. This is what living is all about. An individual really has few victories in his lifetime, but the fact that he gave it all he had puts him in "victory circle" all the time. I do hope you will continue with your speaking next year. We'll see if we can't capture the "big one" for ol' W.H.S. In addition, I hope you will continue your work in drama. I, personally, have received experience and training from being in plays that I wouldn't trade (or sell) for anything. This summer I will be reading a good bit so that I will have a variety of plays to choose from for next year.

Also, keep it your writing. Hopefully, if I teach junior English next year, I can give you a few pointers to improve your already good writing. So have a good summer and, for heaven's sake, DRIVE CAREFULLY!!

Ruth,
Bon souvenir de la

Mme. Grannan

See you next year!
Sincerely,
Tom Tofa

Ruth,

To the Mark Antony of the English class of Westfield High School. I'm confident that your abilities will carry you as far as Mark Anthony, but I hope you don't meet the same end. Seriously, your quiet determination and undaunted enthusiasm are two qualities which should steer you down the path of success. Knowledge is a tool to broaden ones' horizons, but remember, Ruth, the totally educated person is one who is well-rounded in all aspects of life. Don't let academic knowledge limit your potential, as you are, in addition to being intelligent, a warm and engaging individual.

I hope that you have enjoyed this year as much as I have enjoyed having you in class. I'll be looking forward to workingwith you in the future. By the way, any mistakes in this writing are intentional, to test your ability as an Alcove proofreader.

Best Wishes,
Linda Crask

Ruth,

It was been a pleasure to work with you in Geometry. You have been very helpfull in grading papers and have given me many new insight in Geometry. I know you have worked very hard and have had to set thought some very boring classes, but you were always there with your hand up whenever a question has asked. As a teacher it always fel good inside to know someone is following the lecture or discussion.

I know you are disponted that I am not teaching Alg. 3,4. In thee or four years I believe you will fel diffenthy. Personally believe you will profit in having a different teacher for Alg. 3,4. I'll be looking forword to working with you this year as junior sponsor. The junior year is very busy with many activities and class projects. I hope you become involved with class activities and provided leadership for your class.

Of course their is the senior year but let's live one year at a time.

The Procrastinator,

Glenn E. Kunsmuller

Ruth
You're one of the brightest sophomores I know. Keep up the good work in your public speaking career. Lots of luck in the future. God bless you always.
Love

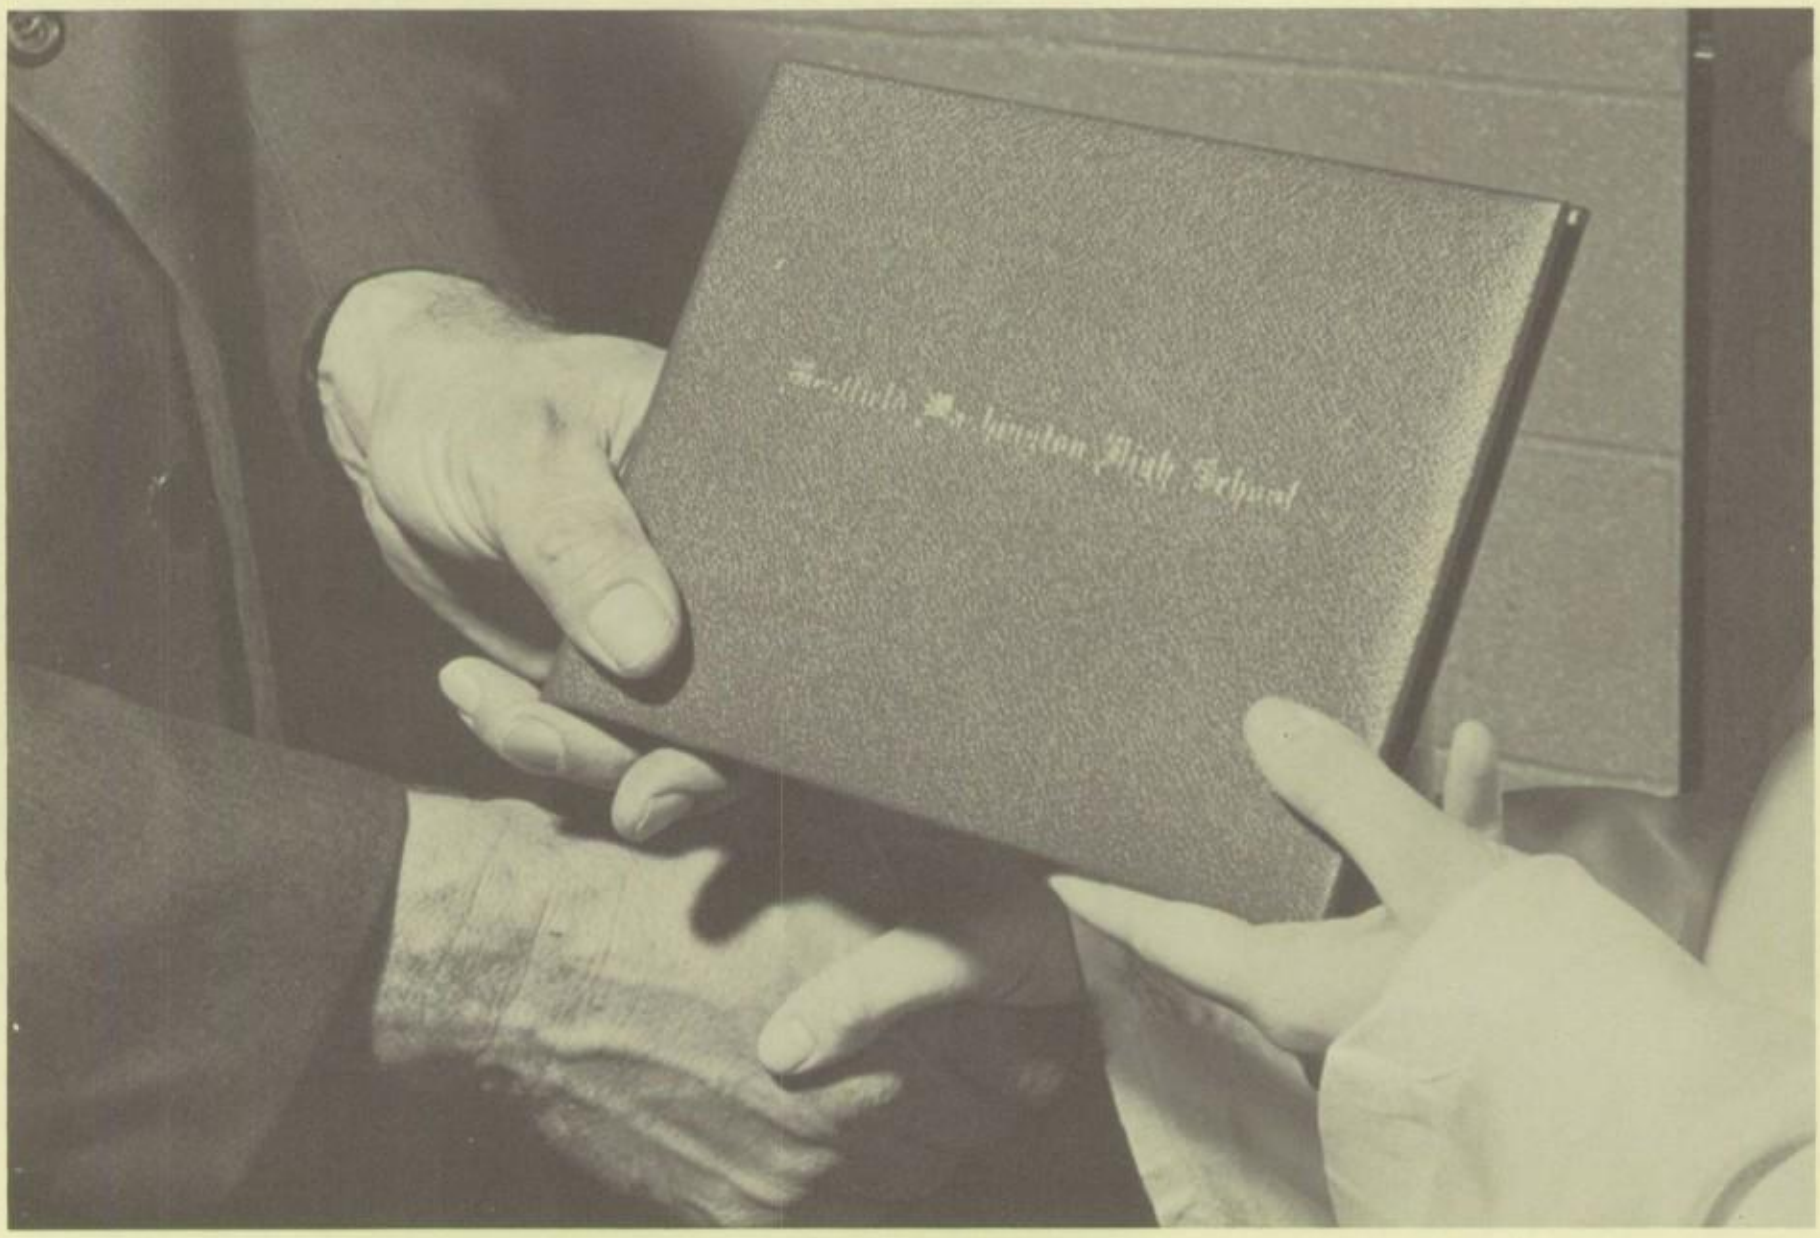
Westfield Washington High School

Westfield, Indiana

Volume XXXVIII

Published by the yearbook staff

of Westfield Washington High School, Westfield, Indiana



Academic achievements were stressed upon the students throughout the year. Mr. Charles McCarnan lectures his history class. Susan Norman takes the responsibility of cheerleading to boost the spirit of the student body. School life is consumated with the presentation of diplomas.

Styles, events,

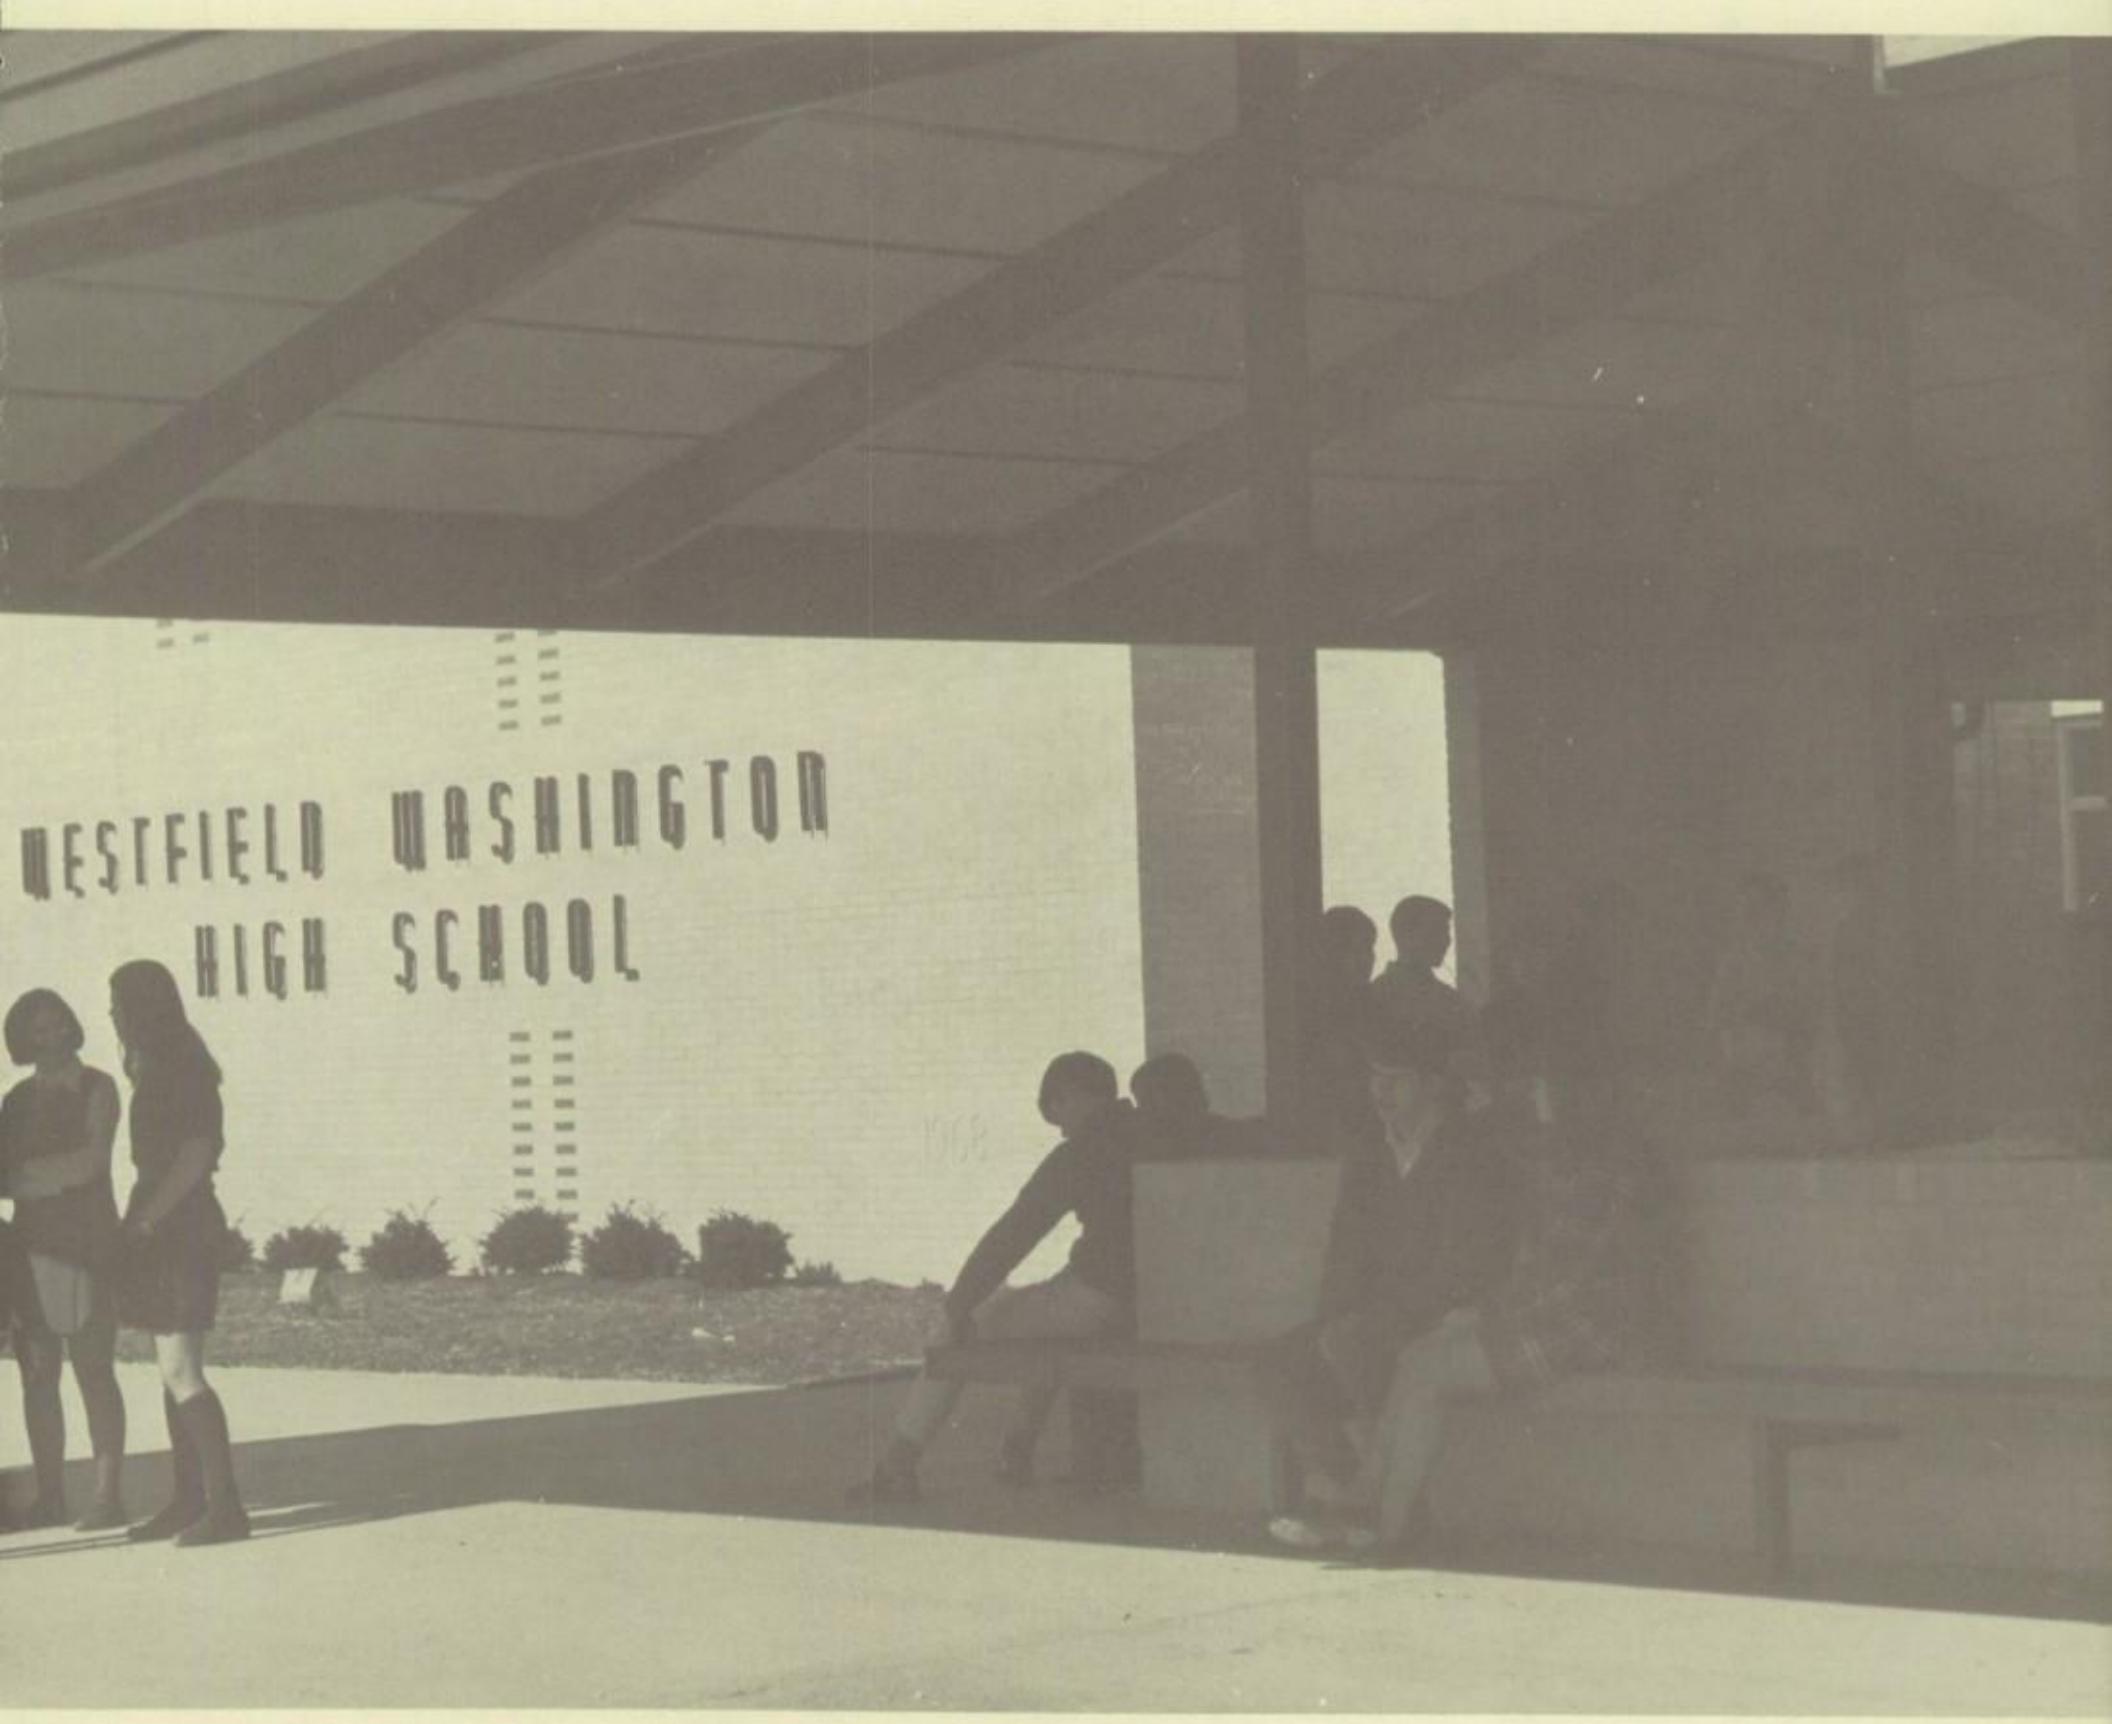
The school year 1969-1970 was typified by a uniqueness found only at the end of a decade. Students gathered in the new cafetorium to sign autographs and to exchange sentiments over new annuals. Somehow the party was different. The spirit of a new time was being born. Summer came and so did drive-in movies, parties, and once again a new kind of spirit when man landed on the moon.

School came and along with it bell bottoms, maxi-coats, a new football coach, numerous student teachers, the largest senior class in school history, and a new spirit. Homecoming was characterized by another junior class win, new innovations in awards, a senior queen, and again a new spirit.

At canteens students danced to the beat of a new spirit – one that chimed in with not only the message of the present but one of the future.

Tully Bascom and Professor Kokintz debated over the use of a world conquering Q-bomb, and the rhythm of Westfield's drama production, THE MOUSE THAT ROARED, echoed through the halls as the all-school play drew capacity crowds. Again a new spirit came forth.

thought shaped new "spirit"



Through all the activities of the students you could count on only one thing; while it might be different the school building would remain the same. Even the onslaughts of the mini-skirt, micro-skirt, and the maxi-coat were not enough to change the hallowed halls. In those same halls you could see long hair, short hair, and regular hair along with sideburns on all males. It was a year of contrasts.

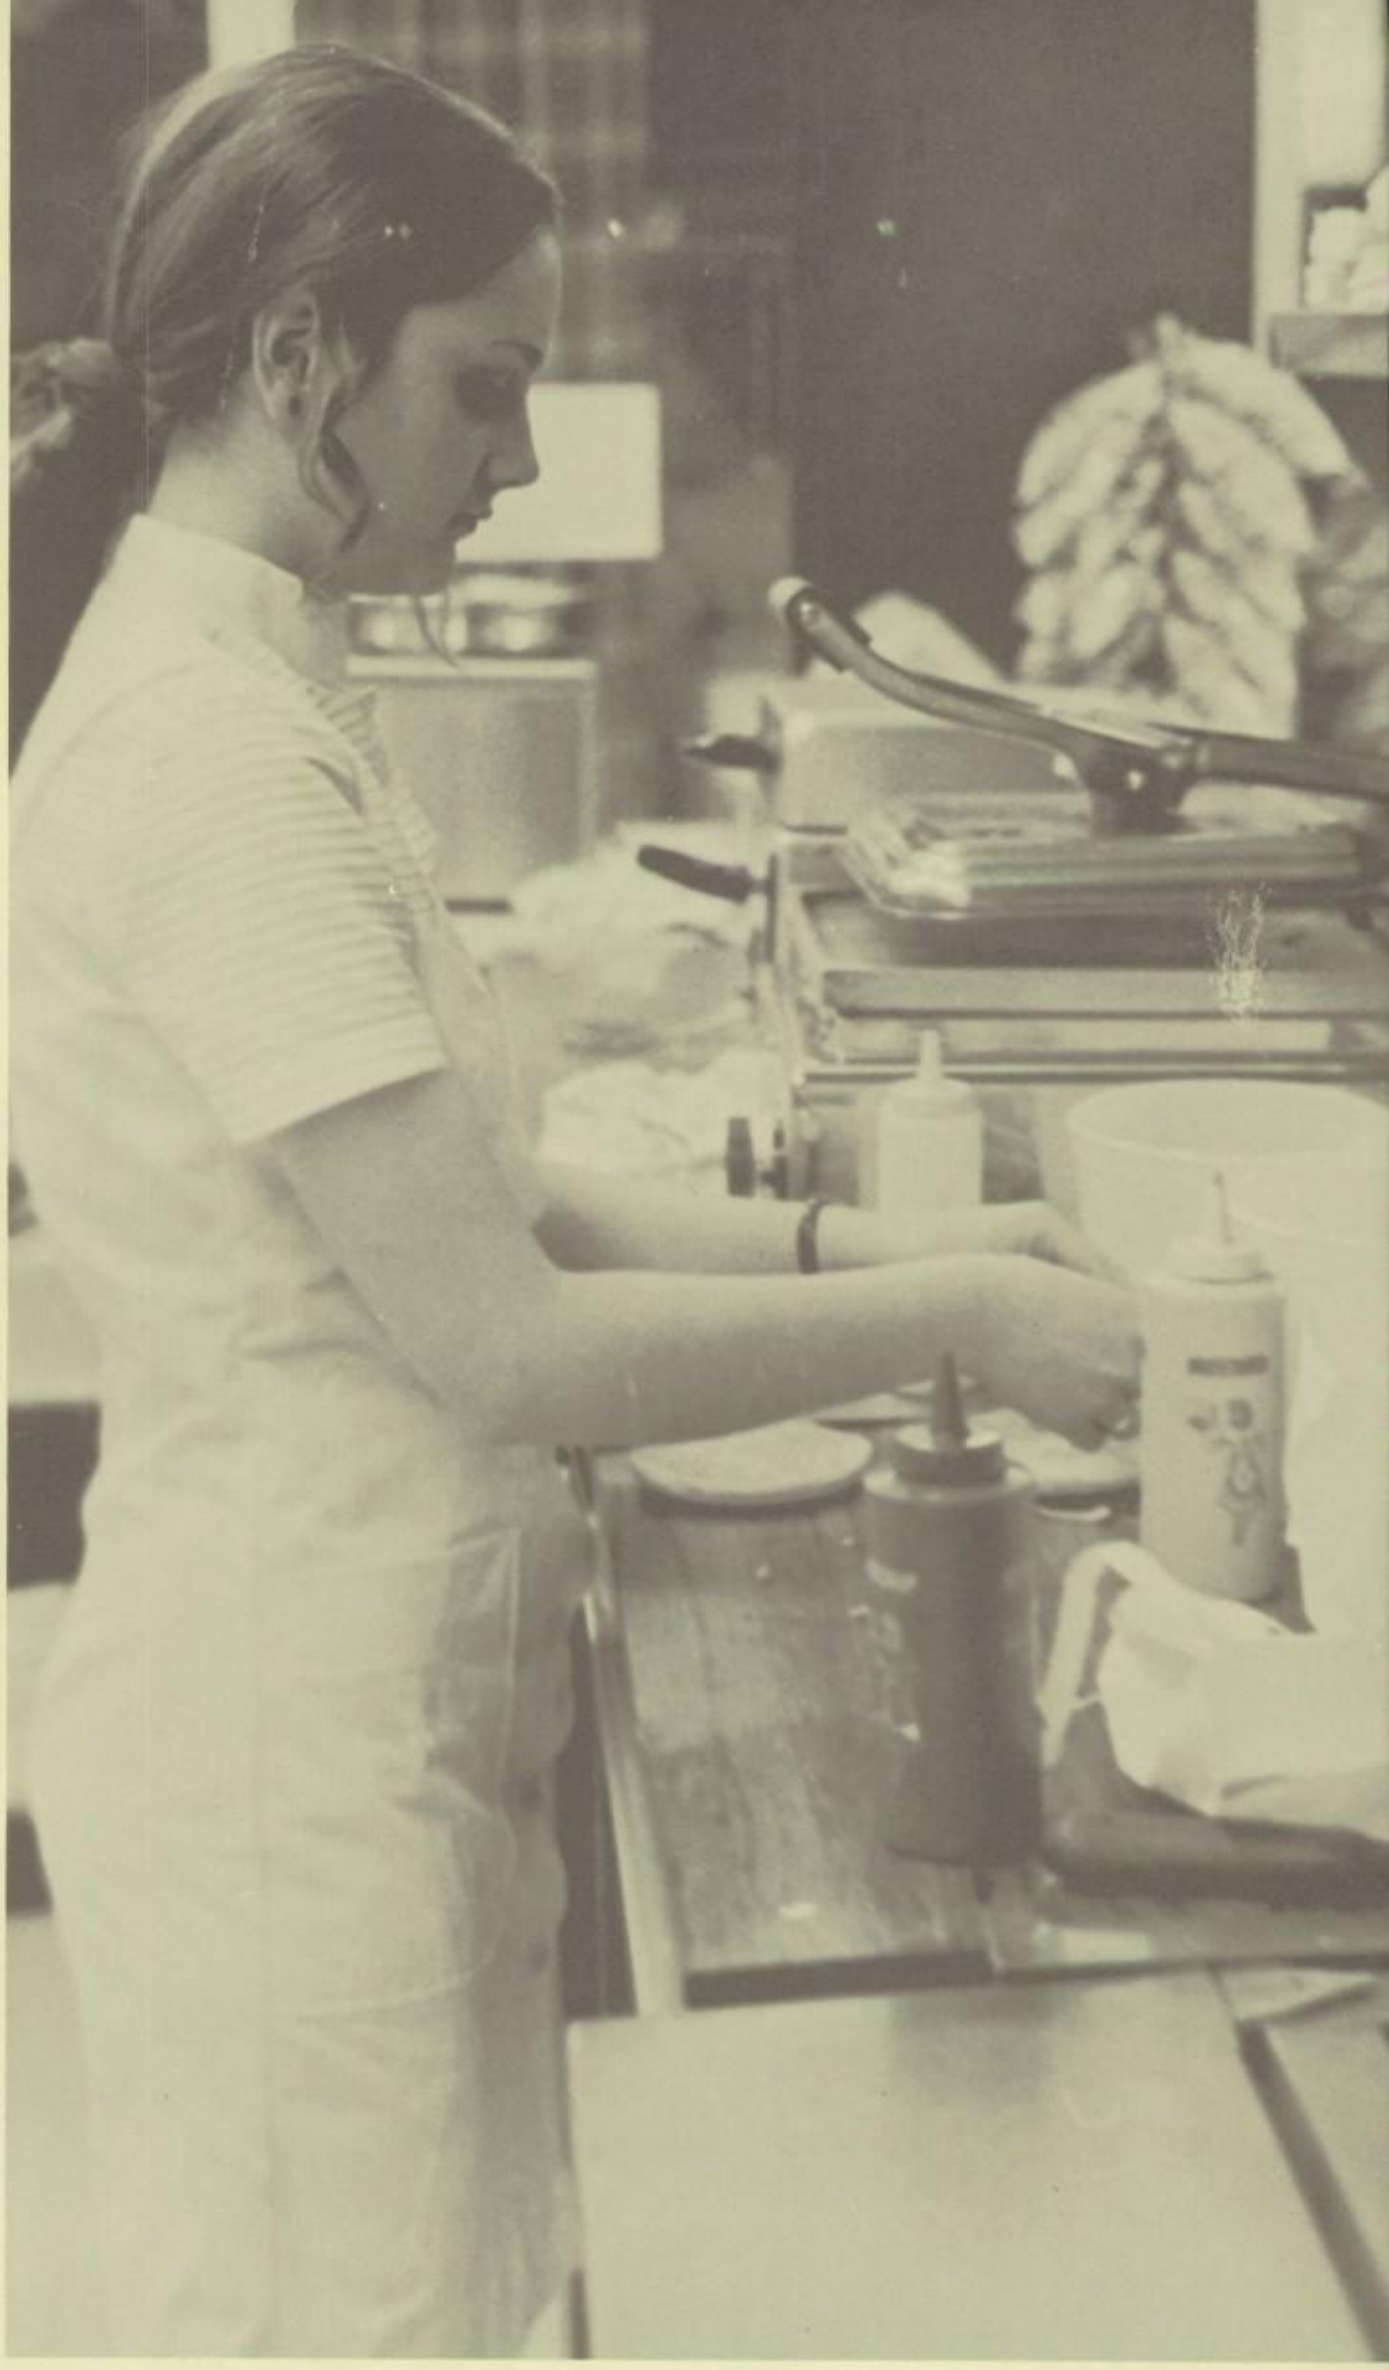
Contentment followed fulfillment

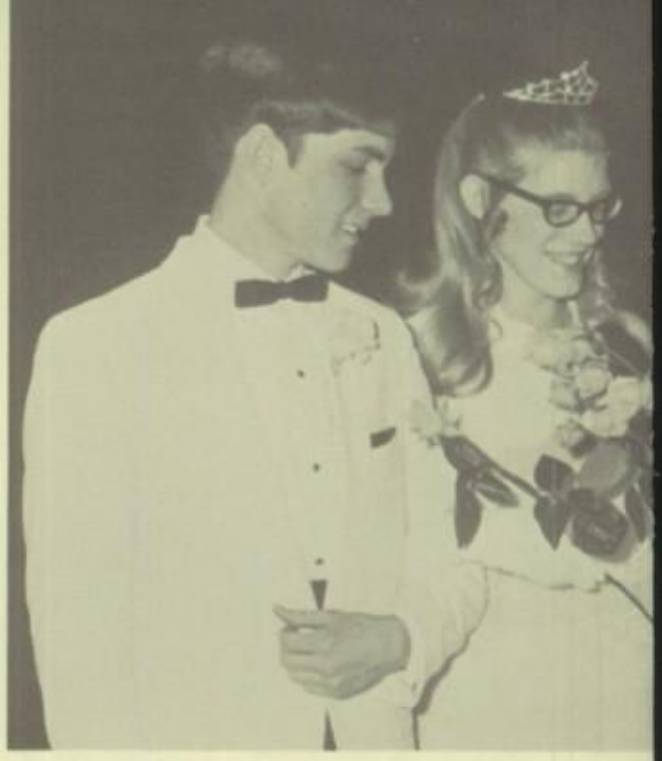
Football season grew into basketball season and the court trembled with the feet of high-spirited girls. Seniors against the juniors, sophomores against the freshmen; classes clashed and victims fell. Tears rolled and hearts sang out and through it all spirit prevailed. In the end it was the senior girls who knew the feeling that only victors know. Before anyone could realize it, the season of giving and receiving was upon the school. A fantasy in the snow brought students together to share among themselves the spirit of generations past, while they danced to the music of their own time.

of duties



Debbie Childers conducts the band in music class. Afterwards, Debbie and Thad Harvey use the school's foyer for a talk. Scott Spiegal works on the senior float and Diane Edwards prepares a sandwich at the Dairy Queen, a favorite eating spot.

A year of elections, boycotts, plays, games developed a sense of urgency, belonging, joy



Suddenly, without warning, semester's end lashed out at the student body catching everyone off guard and throwing most into mass hysteria. Seniors found themselves in a whirlwind of decision making. Preparations had to be made for the future, yet no one knew what was to come. Juniors began wondering about what to do and when to do it. Sophomores nonchalantly glided into peaceful co-existence with teachers until tests were over, the freshmen were faced with the biggest test week of their entire careers. Meanwhile the junior high skipped along their merry way, unconcerned about what was happening, and it was spirit that pulled everyone through.

Throughout the year the spirit of teaching was shared at times by the students themselves. Occasionally college students would visit WHS in an attempt to learn the techniques of handling uproarious freshmen, serious sophomores, happy-go-lucky juniors, and obstinate seniors. Without a doubt the student body was a good teacher.

As the present rapidly turned into the past, the Westfield High School Student Council was touched by the spirit of the future. What more useful gift could the '69-'70 Student Council leave behind than the very foundation for its existence? – a school. Through the help of the Peace Corp the Student Council arranged a cooperative building of a school in Latin America. Funds for building materials were raised by the student body and sent to the Peace Corp for building materials.

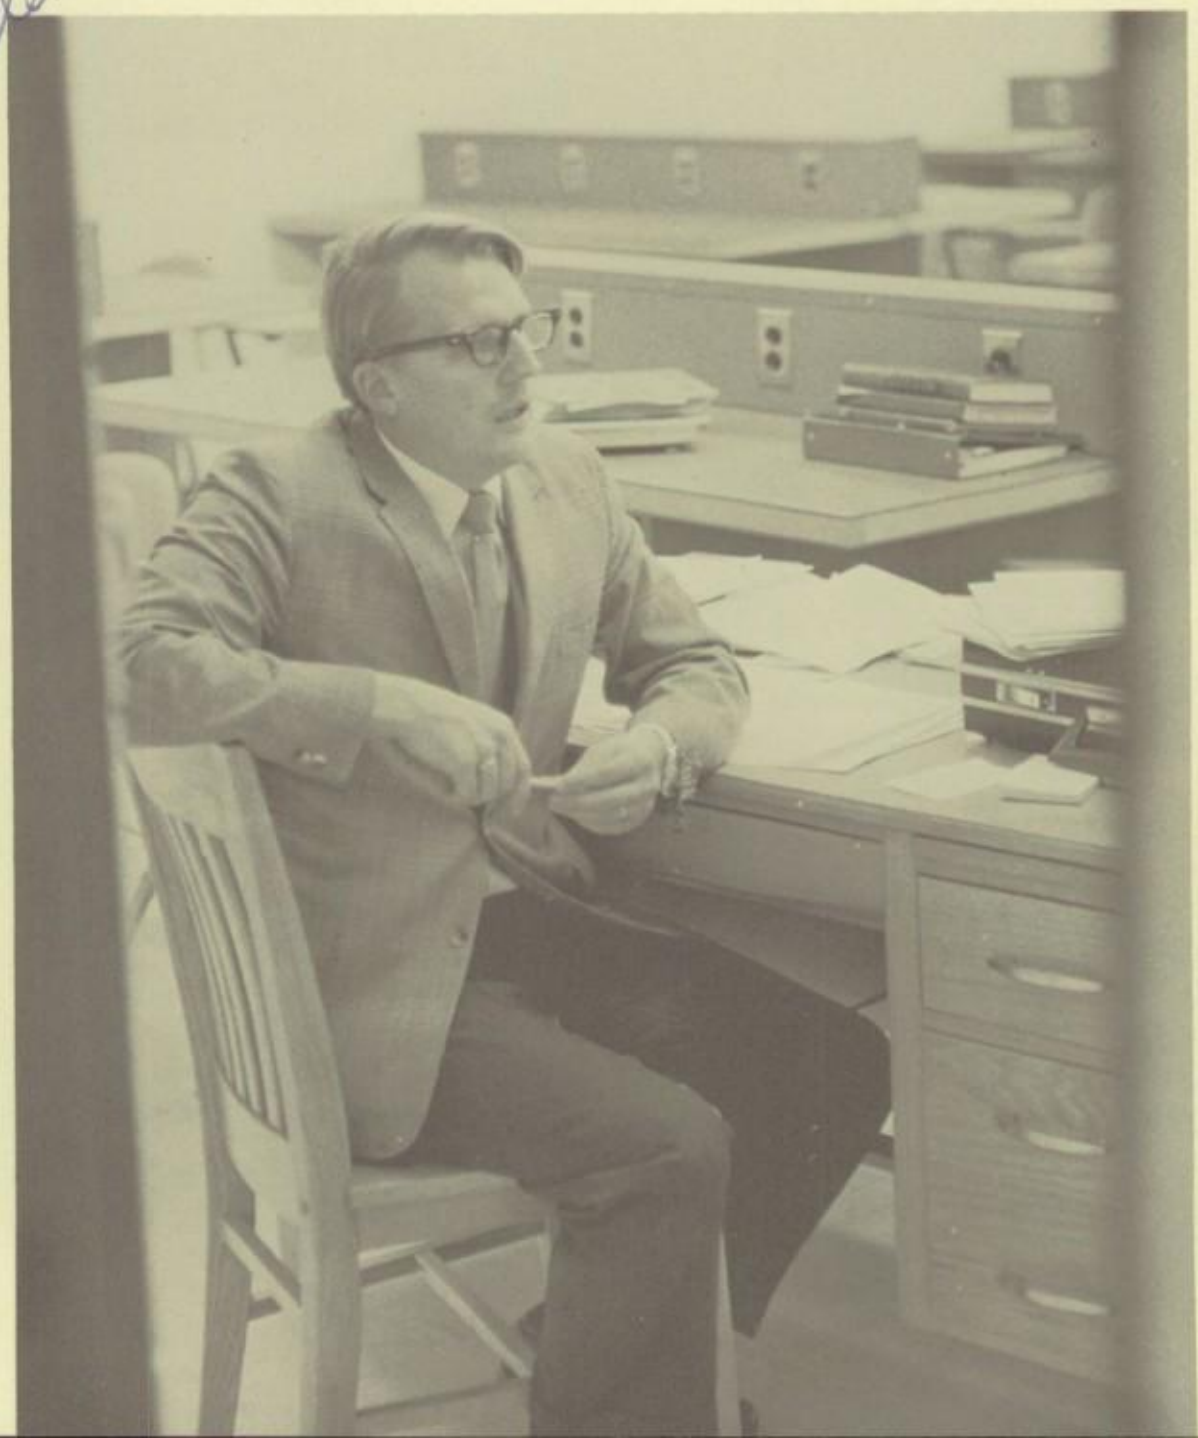
School typified by classes, teachers,

love, buses

The cafeteria was a spectrum of excitement in the latter part of the year. Students became restless. Lunches were getting increasingly out of the taste with the students, portions became smaller and smaller. The spirit of revolution incited the student body. Finally, the attack of the brown paper bags plagued the school for nearly a week. By then cold sandwiches became less appetizing and hot meals more appealing. Eventually the click, click of the lunch card puncher quickened pace and normality settled in the cafetorium once again.

Glenn E. Hunsucker

A school year is typified by a person, place or thing. The person is personified by Mr. Hunsucher, head of the math department. The place is the never-ending line of buses that leave the school grounds of an evening. The thing is represented by love, that much sought after commodity.

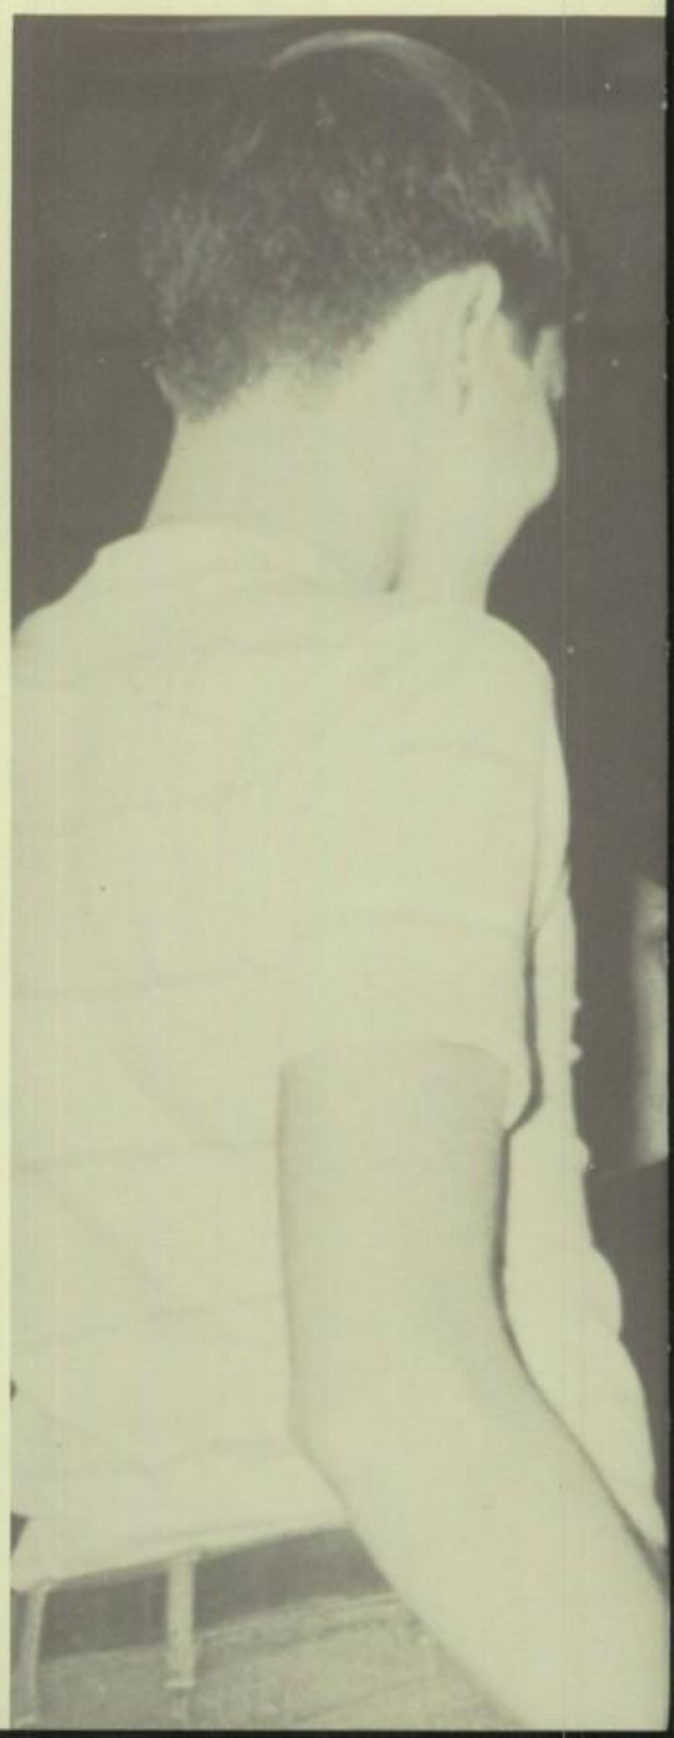


Steve Stackhouse meets his new brother Javier Vijil at the airport.

Mr. Tozer explains some important blocking for the all school play.

Mrs. Stackhouse was Javier's mother away from home, while at Westfield.

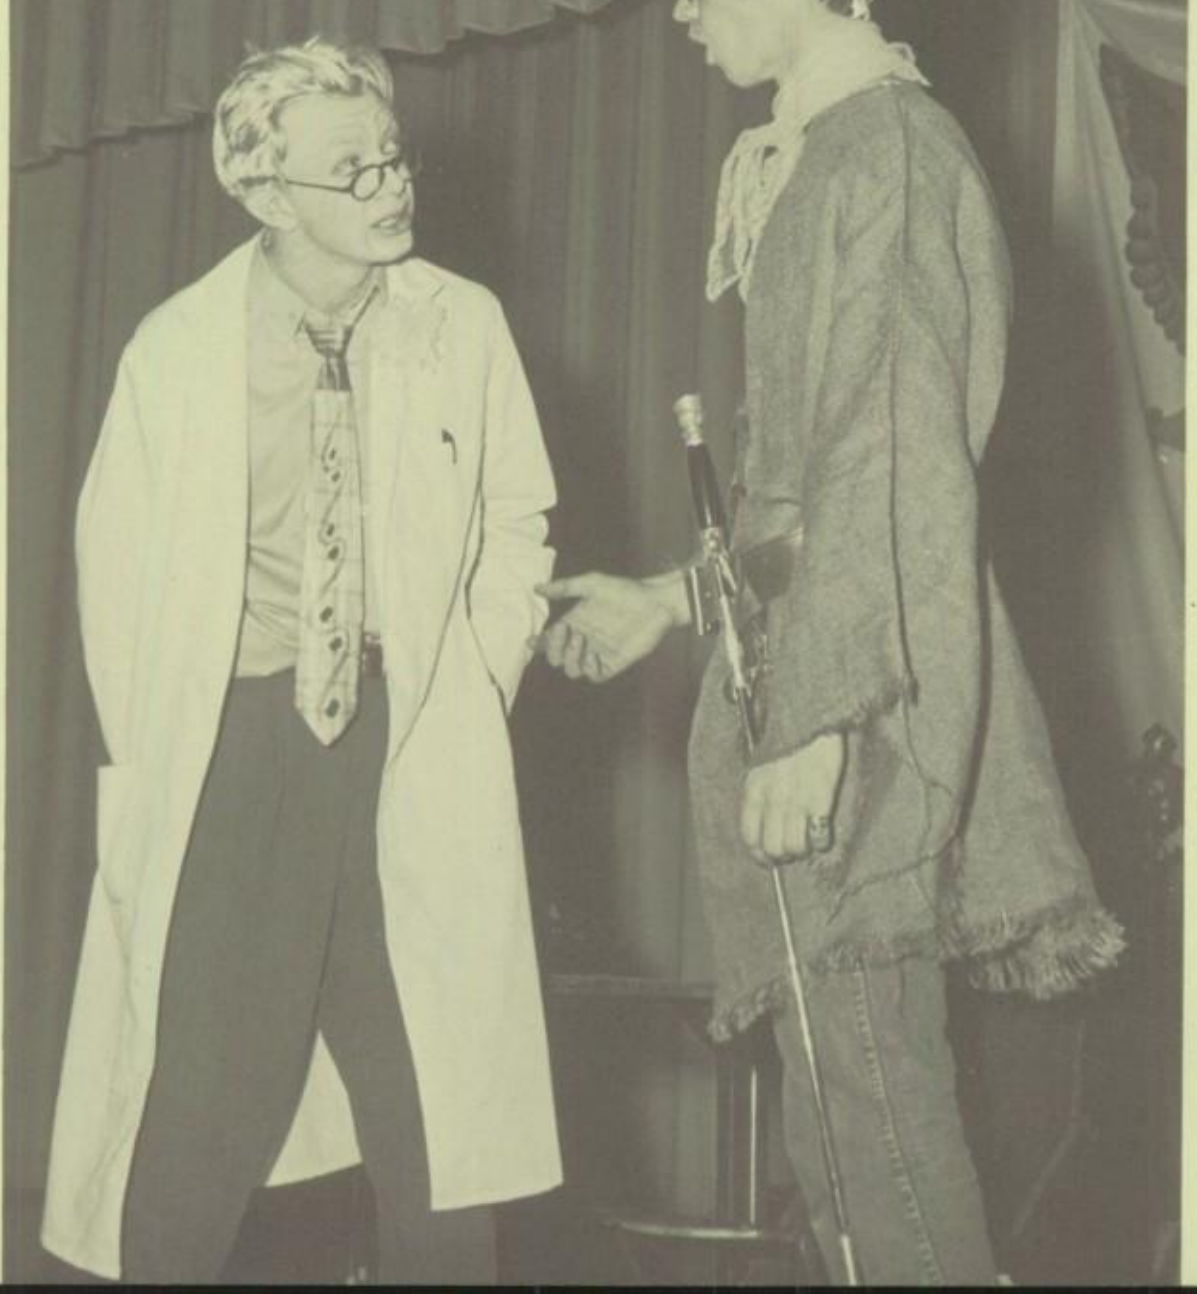
When people are having fun you can see it on their faces. Barb Overman enjoys the music at one of the many canteens.



Emotional communication was important during year

Again Westfield hosted an exchange student. Javier Vigel was his name, and discovering America through Westfield was his game. Communication was a vital instrument in Javier's exploration of Westfield High School. He not only communicated through speech but also through facial expressions and manipulations of his hands. Teachers and students also used these types of communications in their various teaching & learning situations.

Make-up is one of the most pain staking and precise jobs in theater work. Here Diane Edwards finished up the make-up of Jim Henry by tipping his hair.



Mouse

Making his debut as drama director, Mr. Tozer chose THE MOUSE THAT ROARED, as the all school play. The play centered around the leaders of a small European country who tried to become rehabilitated by the United States. The country declares war upon the United States in the hopes of being defeated. When the U.S. ignores the declaration of war the country invades New York City. Through a fluke the country captures a top physicist and a wonderful "Q" bomb. The bombs enables the country to bargain with the United States and peace is restored."

Homecoming

This year's homecoming provided tense excitement for everyone. The best decorated car trophy made its first appearence in the '69 homecoming festivities. For the fifth consecutive year the class of '71 swept the honors for the float competition. This is a school record and entitles the Juniors to keep the trophy awarded to them at this year's ceremonies.

The highlight of the evening, however was the selection of the Queen. Five of Westfield High School's most beautiful ladies were chosen to represent the four high school classes and the football team. The class of '70 had the honor of being represented by the winner as Senior Pam Rheinheimer was crowned queen of the 1969 homecoming ceremonies.

New spirit shown in varied ways

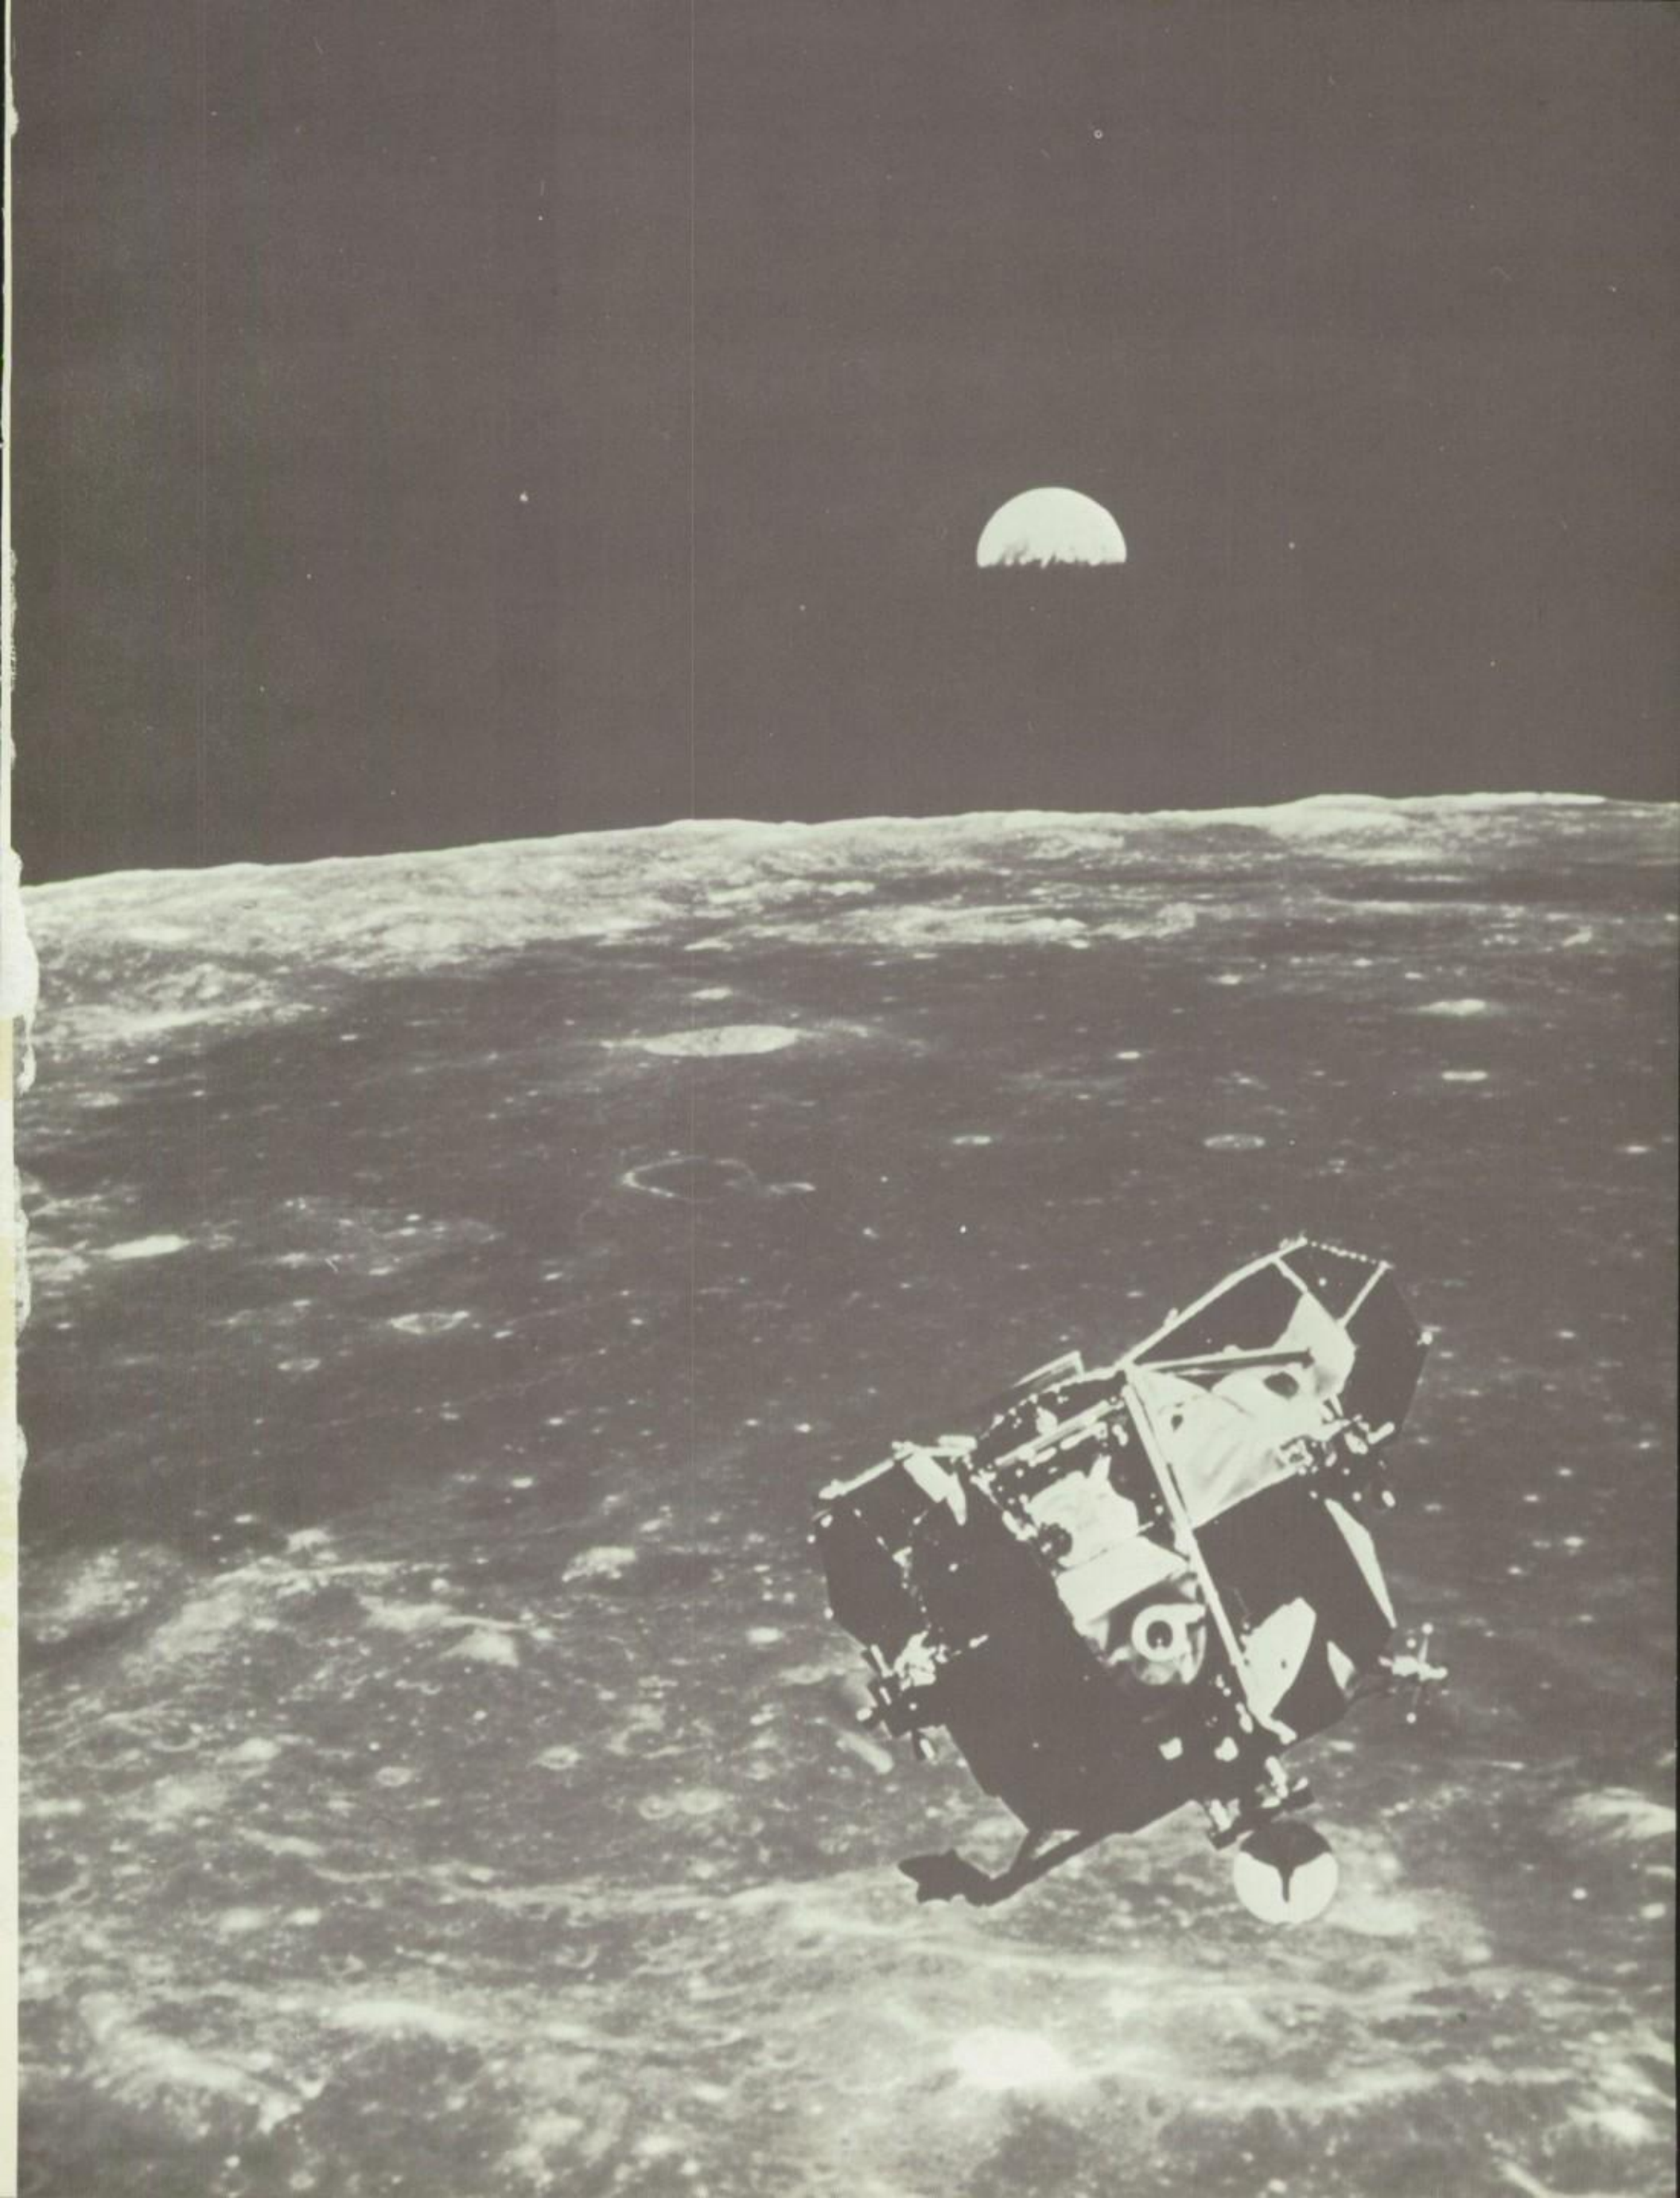
What is this new kind of spirit? It's the spirit of Westfield. It's exemplified in every student and faculty member, no matter what field they're in.

It's the most important quality in every student's character. This spirit is that force which drives a student to his best performance on stage or on the field. It leads the way for those who are helplessly caught in a maze of problems with no book to give the answers. It's that emotion which takes hold when all else fails and enables a student to pass an impossible test, or do a most complex assignment.

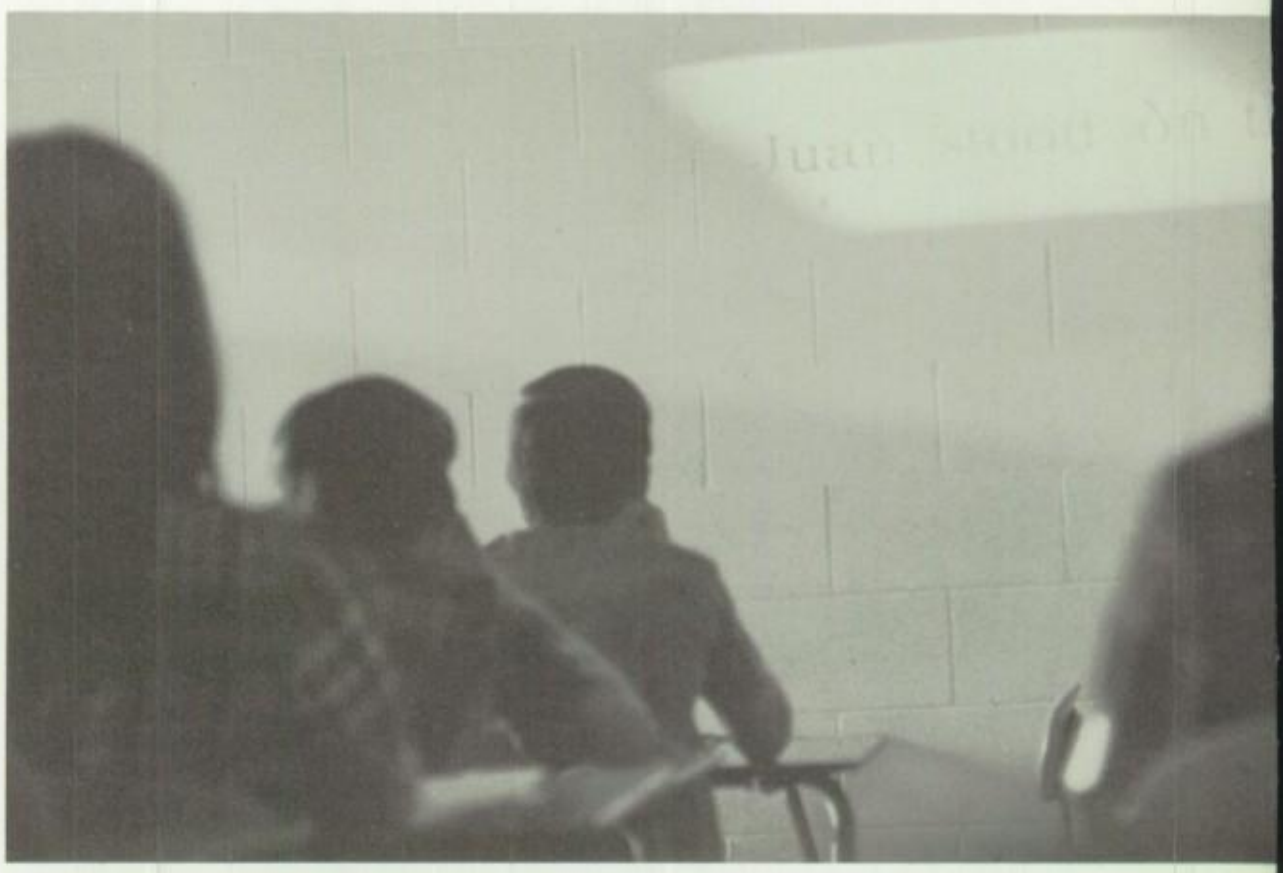
What is this spirit? This spirit is the ability of every single student to bring out the individuality in himself – to say no when everyone else says yes, to face insurmountable odds with a firm stance, and to give in sometimes even when it hurts. This spirit is the opportunity of every person, no matter how unimportant, to do his or her own thing.

Spirit may be shown in more than one way. Above, Mrs. Virginia Farmer, school secretary, decorates for Christmas. Right, Jenny Hinshaw performs a cheer.

Opposite page, the Apollo 11 lunar module ascent stage photographed from the command and service module during rendezvous in lunar orbit. The LM was making its docking approach to the CSM.



Academics



Students take advantage of modern educational facilities to further their knowledge. Reading machines increased the capacities of slow readers. Faculty debates such as the ones between Mr. Furimsky and Mrs. Plummer enlightened many students to the fact that even teachers make mistakes. Martha Whittle, a language student, concentrates on perfecting pronunciation.

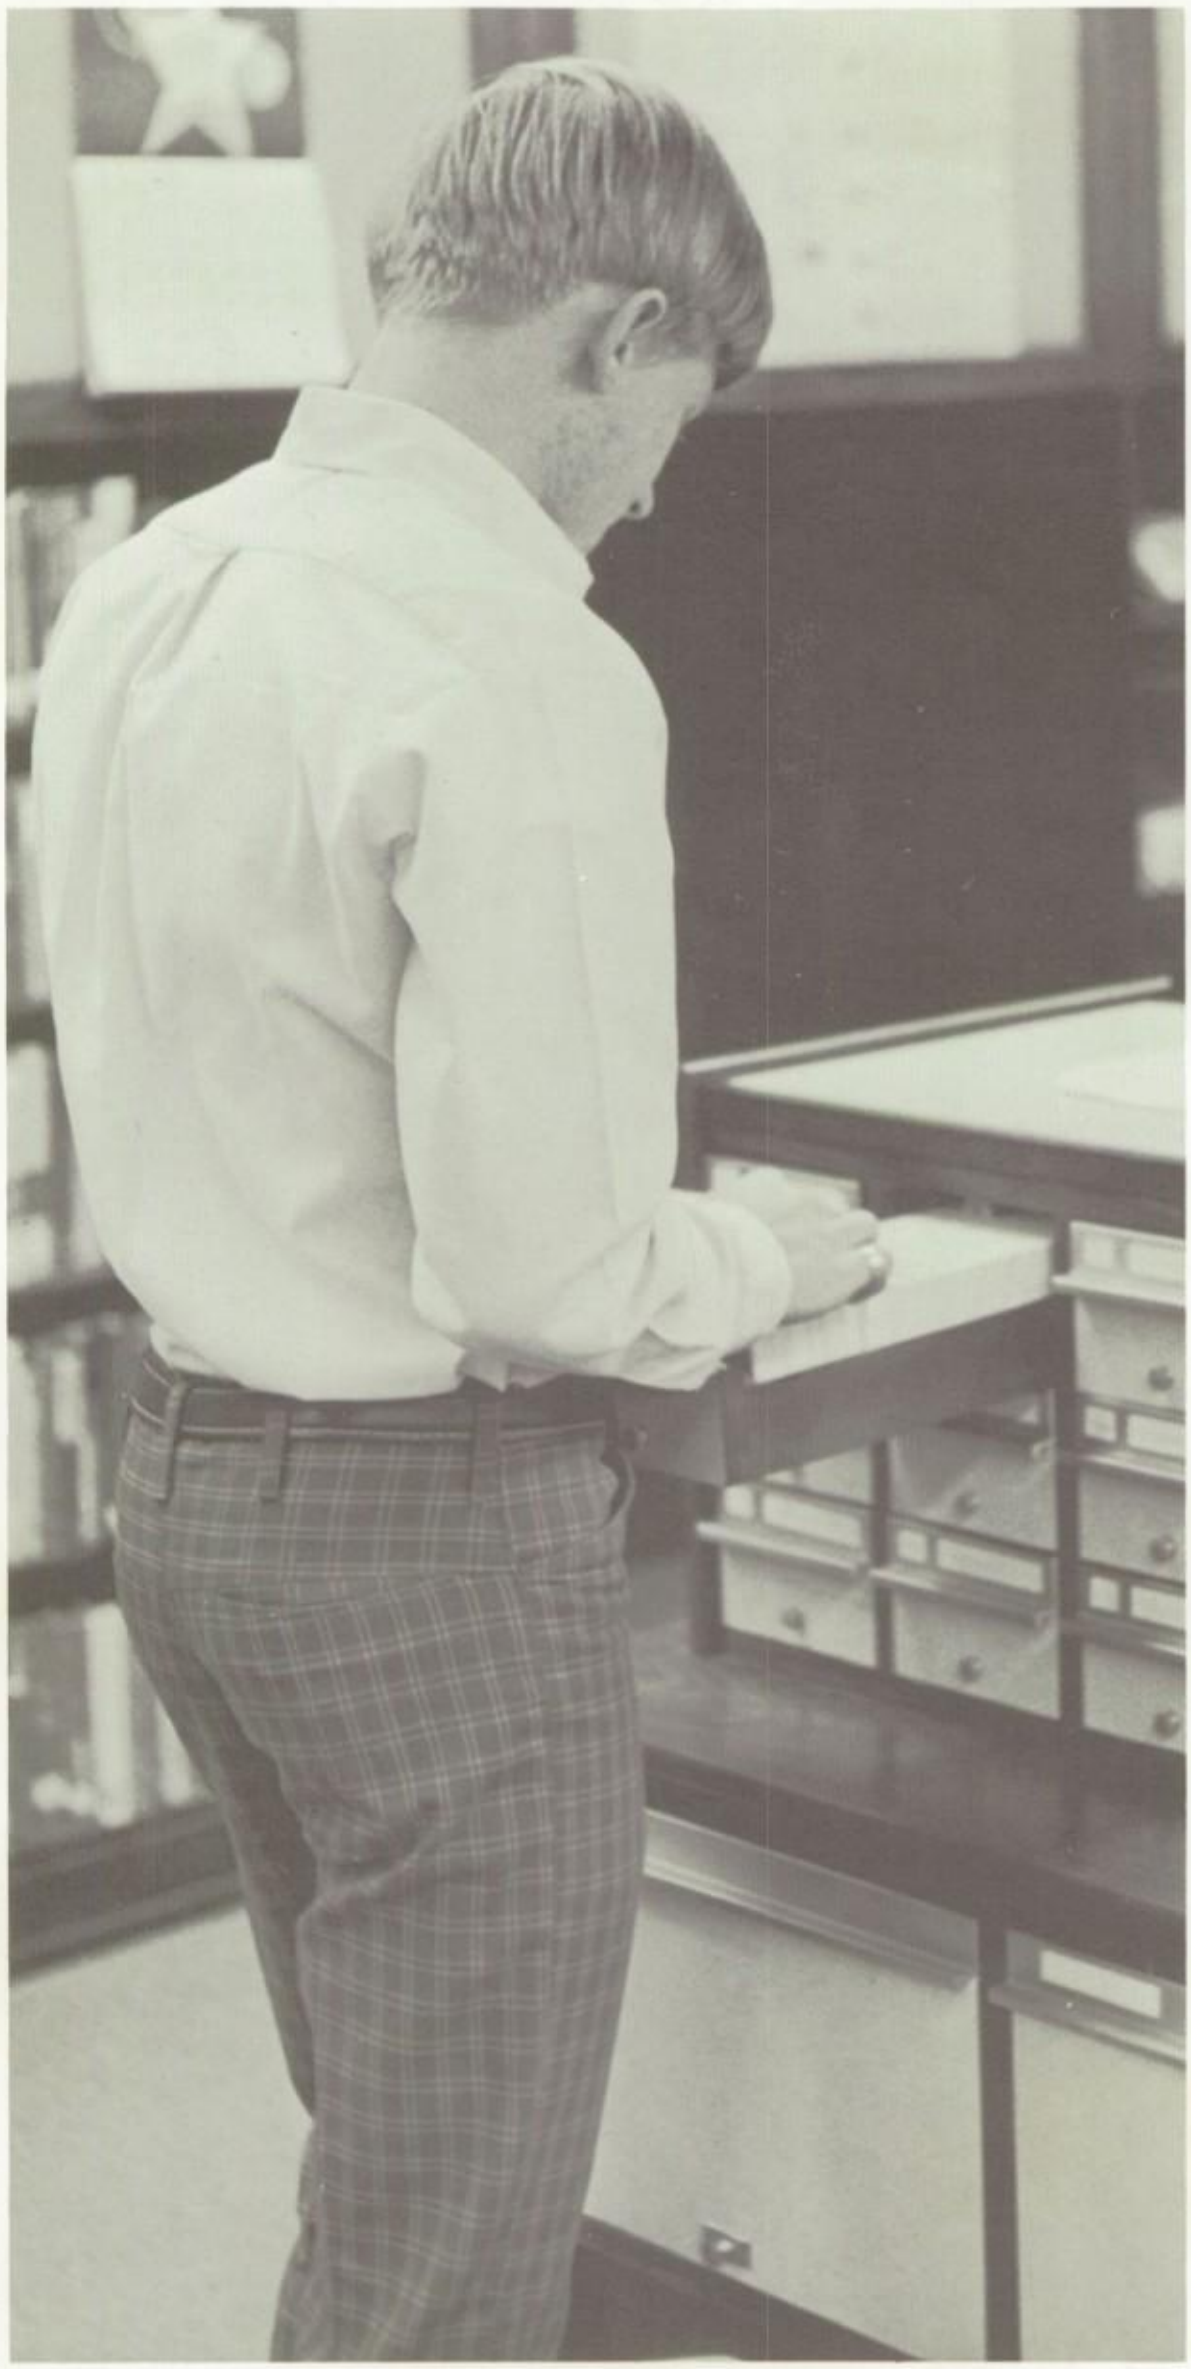
Languages bridged communication gaps

The language arts of Spanish, Latin and French, offered at Westfield High School, are major factors benefiting the mutual understanding of different countries and their habits. Journalism I and II give the students opportunities to express their ideas and opinions of certain events by improving many composition skills and by learning how to express them in written articles.

Student teacher, Miss Vaught, helps first-year Spanish students translate English to Spanish.



Dan Mathews, senior, uses the library card files to obtain valuable research data.

Drama, speech developed expressive skills

In readiness of an approaching play, Cindy Knight, Linda Hunt, and Lois Schlensker set scenes on the stage.

Striving to promote better world understanding, the speech and drama department encourages and stresses the individual student's abilities to communicate. The main goal of the expressive classes is to widen each student's perception of varied situations and his skills in expressing his thoughts. This is accomplished by speaking and demonstrating the emotions felt by the student in each unique situation. Study in drama, speech, and related fields allows the students to be more in command of his own thoughts and emotions as they approach maturity. Their knowledge of the many different styles of enunciation and pronunciation is also increased and improved.

While studying these courses, the students are also preparing for the time when they will undoubtedly come in contact with the increasing area of drama and speech. By building better communication, we approach world unity sooner.

Catching and maintaining the audience's attention, Helen Barker demonstrates the basic principles of fitting a pattern for David Adamson.

Focusing spotlights, Andy Redd, Vance Waddle, and John Watson participate in drama production as part of the lighting crew.

Students learned human understanding

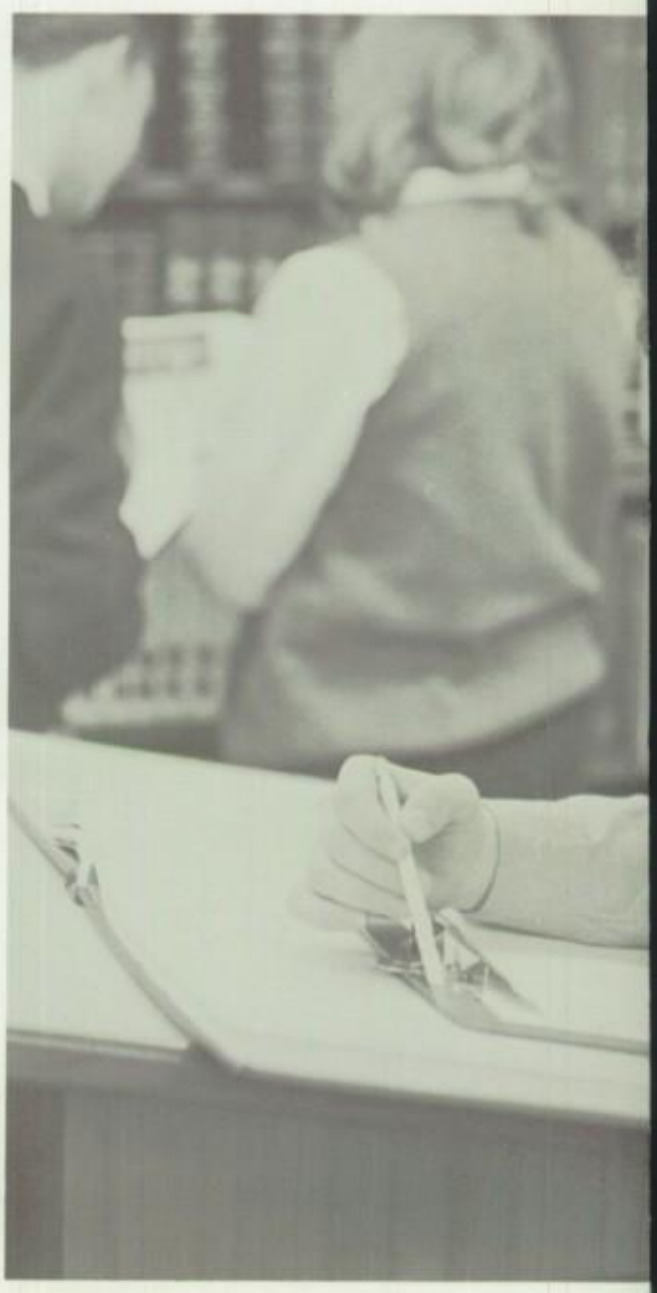
Journey's into history lead to striking lessons of the past and thrilling challenges of history-in-the-making. World and U.S. history gave the students an opportunity to view exploration, conflict, and great progress in the development of human civilization and American society.

Through history and guidance classes students acquired knowledge of the past and present and gained the ability to cope with the problems of the future.

Sociology and psychology were offered to seniors wanting to study about the human mind and behavior.

There were a variety of history courses offered to both junior high and high school students.

Sherry Farris, Rebecca Montoya and Barbara Rader draw a colorful world map for their semester project in eighth grade history class.



Paul Martz, a senior, checks the World Atlas

Junior history students stay current with events around the world by reading the New York Times, Chicago Tribune and the London Times.

Sophomore Valerie Cockrall studiously examines the Kuder Preference test.

Art, home ec., music created atmosphere

Art, music, and home economics are courses that give the student a chance to express himself, to be original, and very creative.

Many creative and different experiences are offered in the art department to help students learn to use their hands effectively and to help students learn to think for themselves. Rug weaving, sketching, and pottery are favorites with the art students. Advanced students go into oil painting using original designs.

The home economics courses prepare girls for homemaking and family living. Girls studying foods learn that tempting meals require careful planning and preparation. Clothing courses stress not only sewing skills, but also the importance of personal grooming. Looking ahead, family living students study human relations and life problems.

To develop each student's musical skill, knowledge, and enjoyment to his fullest ability is the purpose of the music department. Activities include general music, chorus, and band. The music program is a part of the continuous musical experience that begins in the elementary school and extends through high school. General music is a required seventh and eighth grade course, while band is offered to both junior high and high school. Chorus is open to high school students who wish to further their vocal music skills. The music department gave a special Christmas program.

Industrial Arts trained students for vocations

Classes in industrial arts, architectural drawing, shop, and woodworking, provide the students with a general knowledge of the procedures and products of the many individual industries and organizations they may encounter later.

In architectural drawing, many abilities of the students are developed, including the planning of buildings and the construction of the many different types of plans.

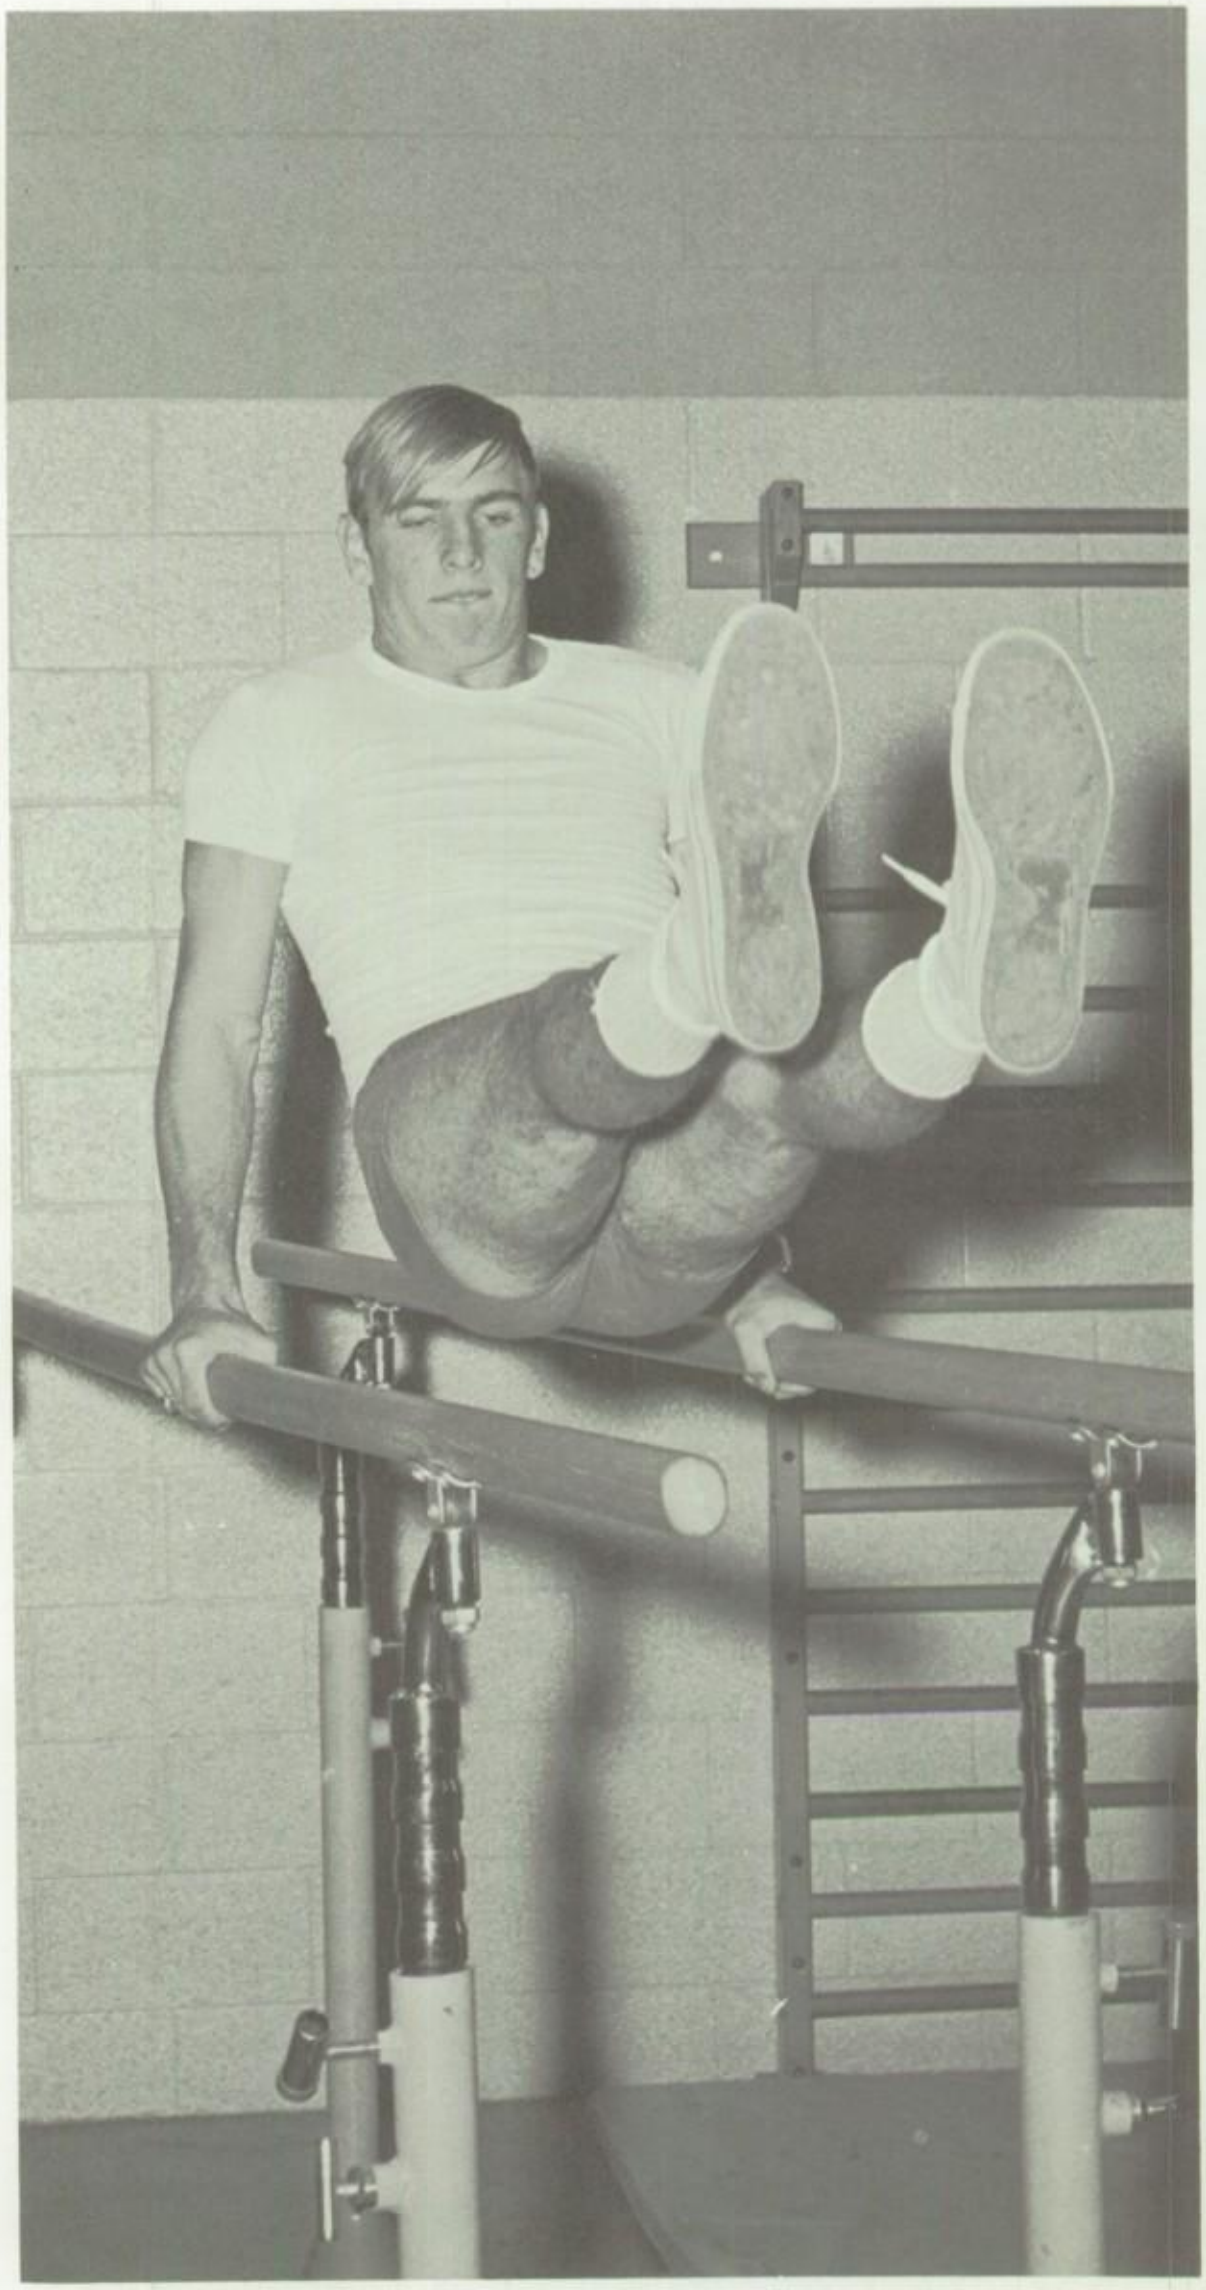
Shop class members gain practical experience and information while enjoying the use of the many tools and machines in the shop departments.

The students work on projects both in their leisure time and in class participation. They plan their projects, and with the supervision and help of the instructors and other class members, continue to develop them.

Members of the shop class further their knowledge of hoists by practical application with a car.

In woodworking, Mike Statzer uses a lathe to shape a wooden table leg.

Mr. Lindsay explains floor plans to attentive architectural drawing students.



Tim Dugger demonstrates his skill in the use of the parallel bars during physical ed.

Combined program built whole student

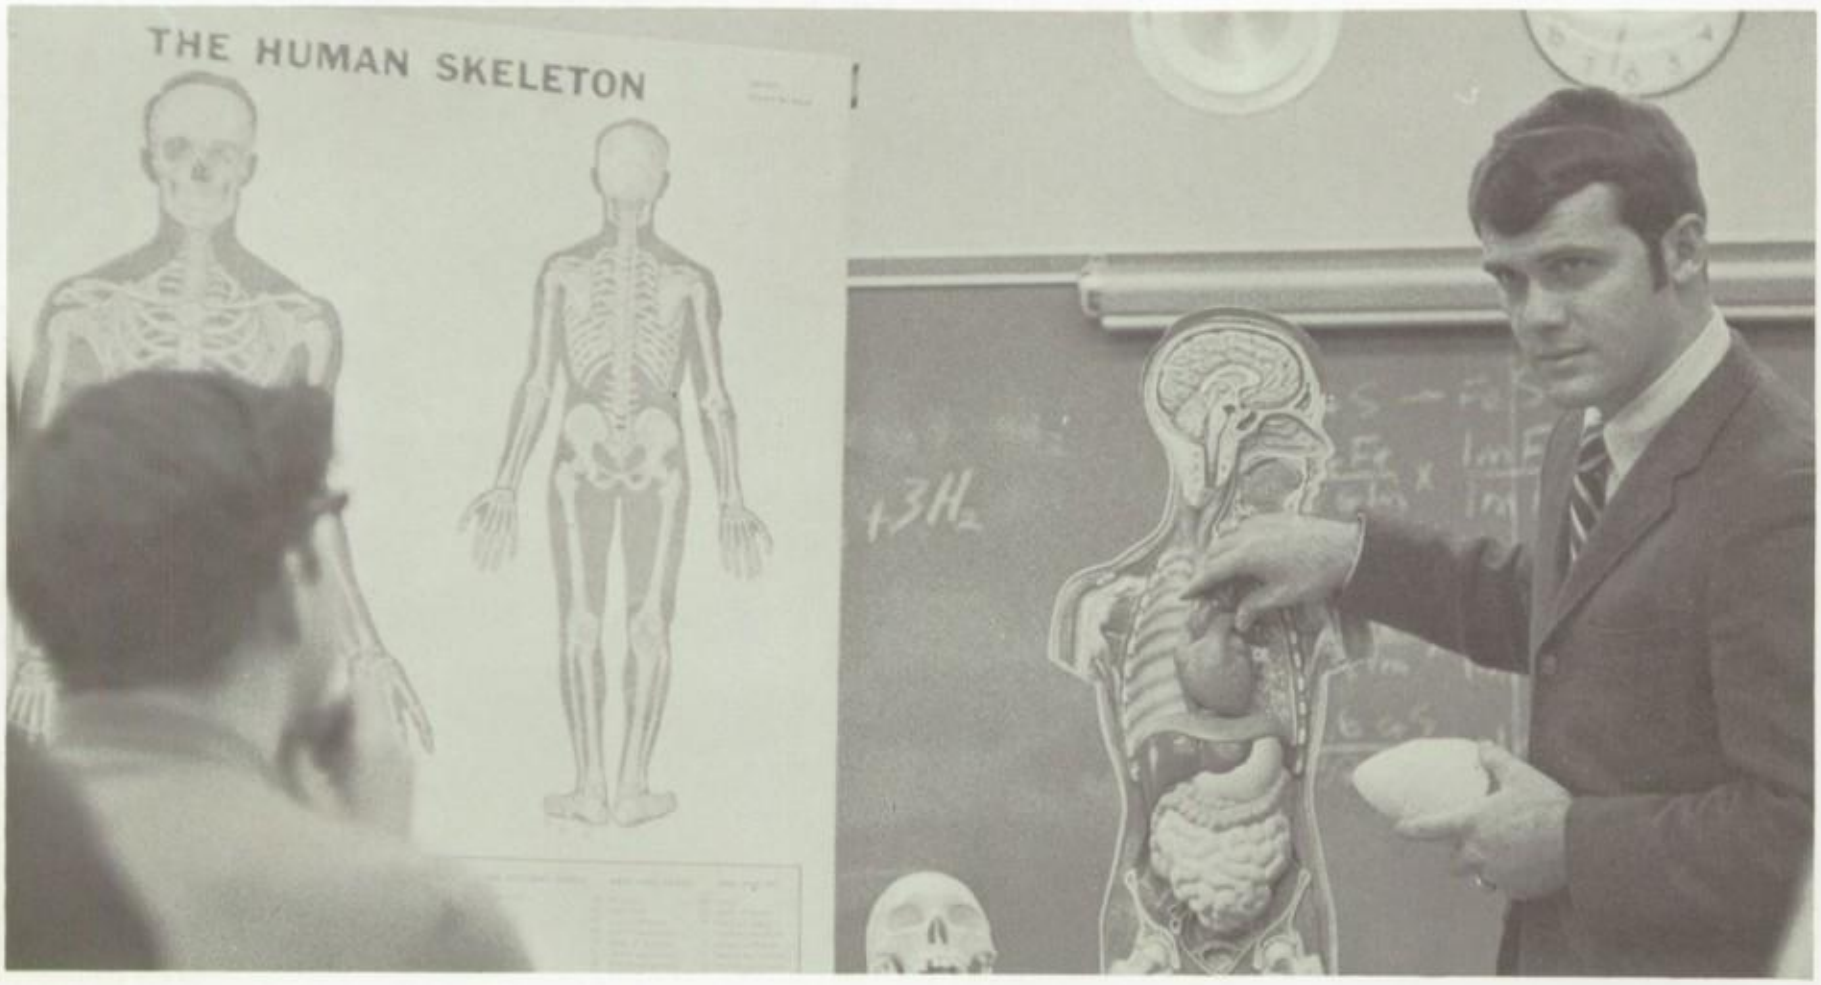
Dancing lessons were just a small part of Westfield's physical education classes.

The physical education program at Westfield High School was somewhat revised. This year a more refined program for dancing was introduced. Classes were conducted to teach such steps as the Bunny Hop, and the Troika, a Russian folk dance.

Freshmen changed their schedules from five days of physical education a week to only three days freshman year and three days sophomore year. The narcotics and physiology classes were also split into freshman and sophomore courses.

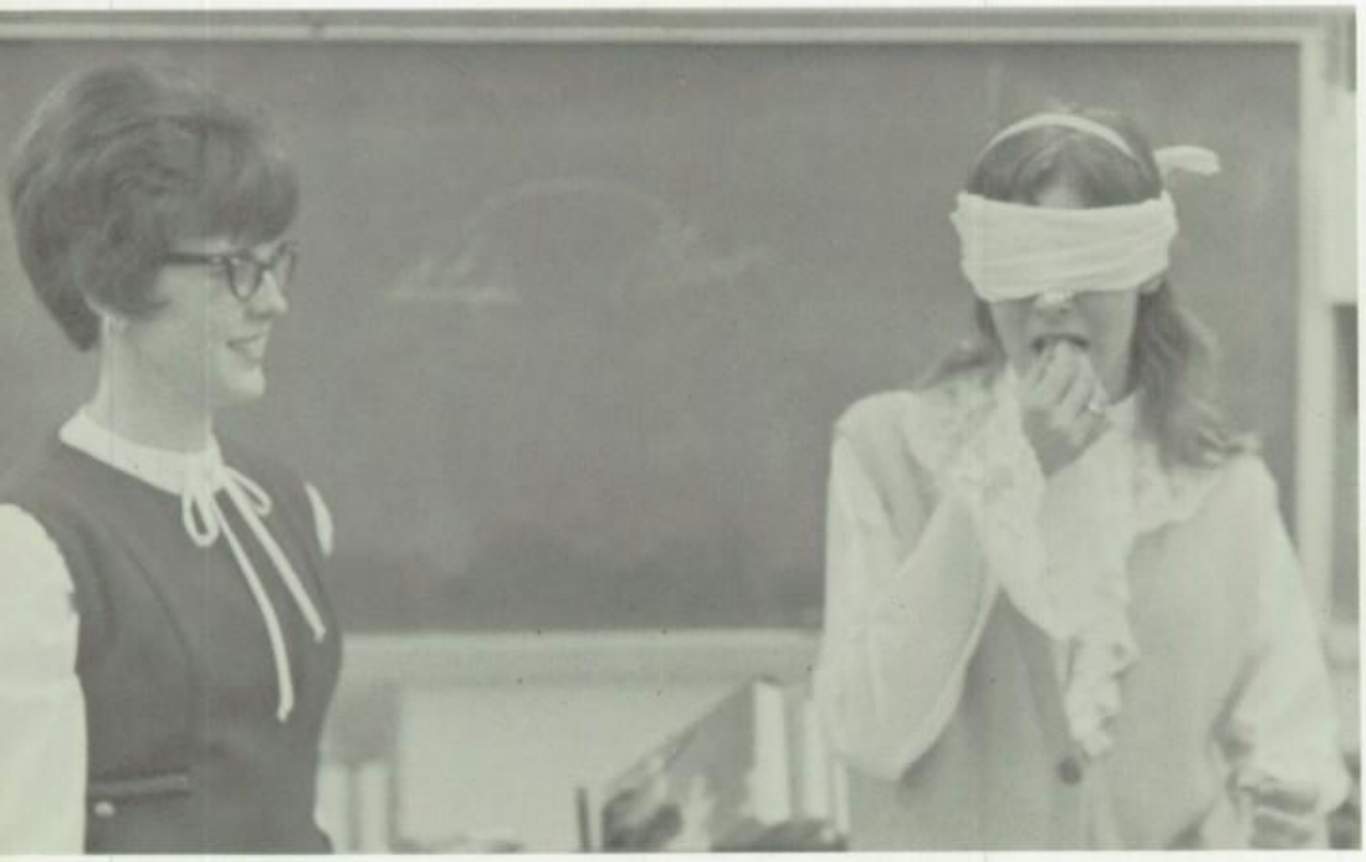
A new member to the physical education staff, Mrs. Plummer, and physical education student teacher Mr. Kehrer, helped Mrs. Rice, Mr. Furimsky, and Mr. Paxton provide a well-rounded program.

The study of drugs, tobacco, and alcohol was covered with great care in narcotics classes. Students were made aware of the dangerous effects that smoking, drinking, and taking dope can have on the human body. In physiology the students learned the vital functions of the human body.



Mr. Kehrer, through the use of a cross section of the human body, explains to his anatomy class the position of the human organs.

Courses influenced new students



General business students learn about the many products on the market today by running taste tests on several different products that were brought in by students.

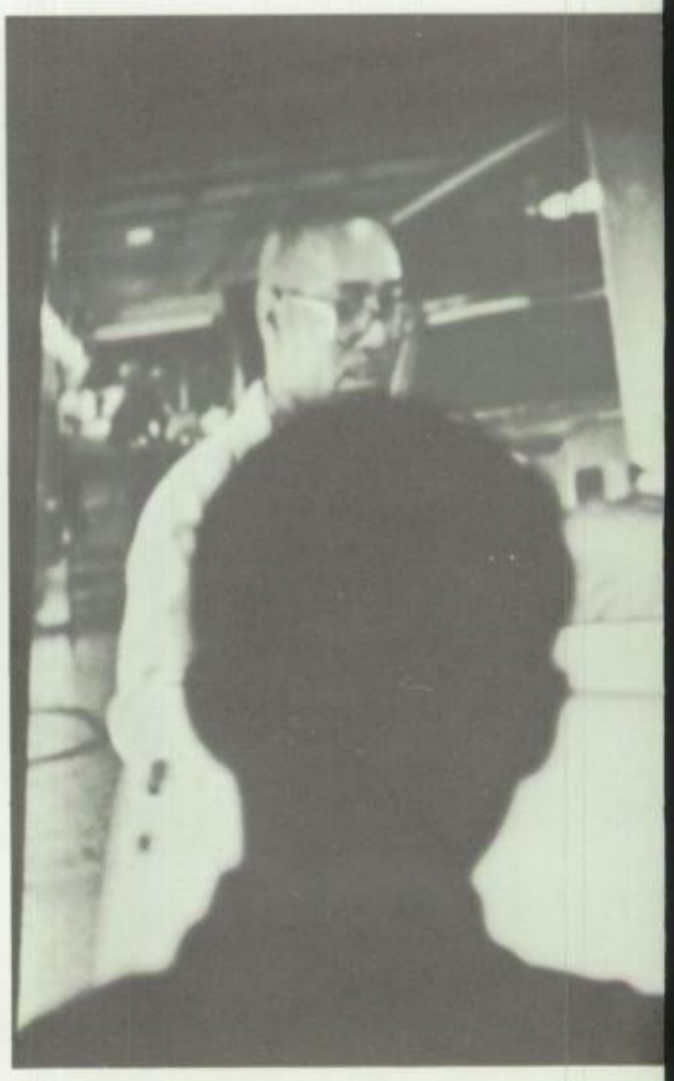
Taking one of many business courses helps add experience for individuals planning to enter the business world.

In Typing I, the basic fundamentals of operating a manual typewriter are taught. This includes cleaning the typewriter, completing business forms and letters, and taking timed writings which build up speed as well as accuracy in preparation for Typing II.

The advanced typing and office practice classes familiarize students with many office machines and procedures they will encounter in future office work. Finger dexterity and speed are further developed as typing students continue their knowledge of the secretarial field by enrolling in shorthand.

General business, a preparatory

During their advanced typing class, juniors, Margaret Lockhart and Deanna Runyan, discuss and chart their typing progress of accuracy and speed on five-minute timed writings. Speed is important, but not as important as accuracy.



Interested retail management students view films to learn about the auto industry.

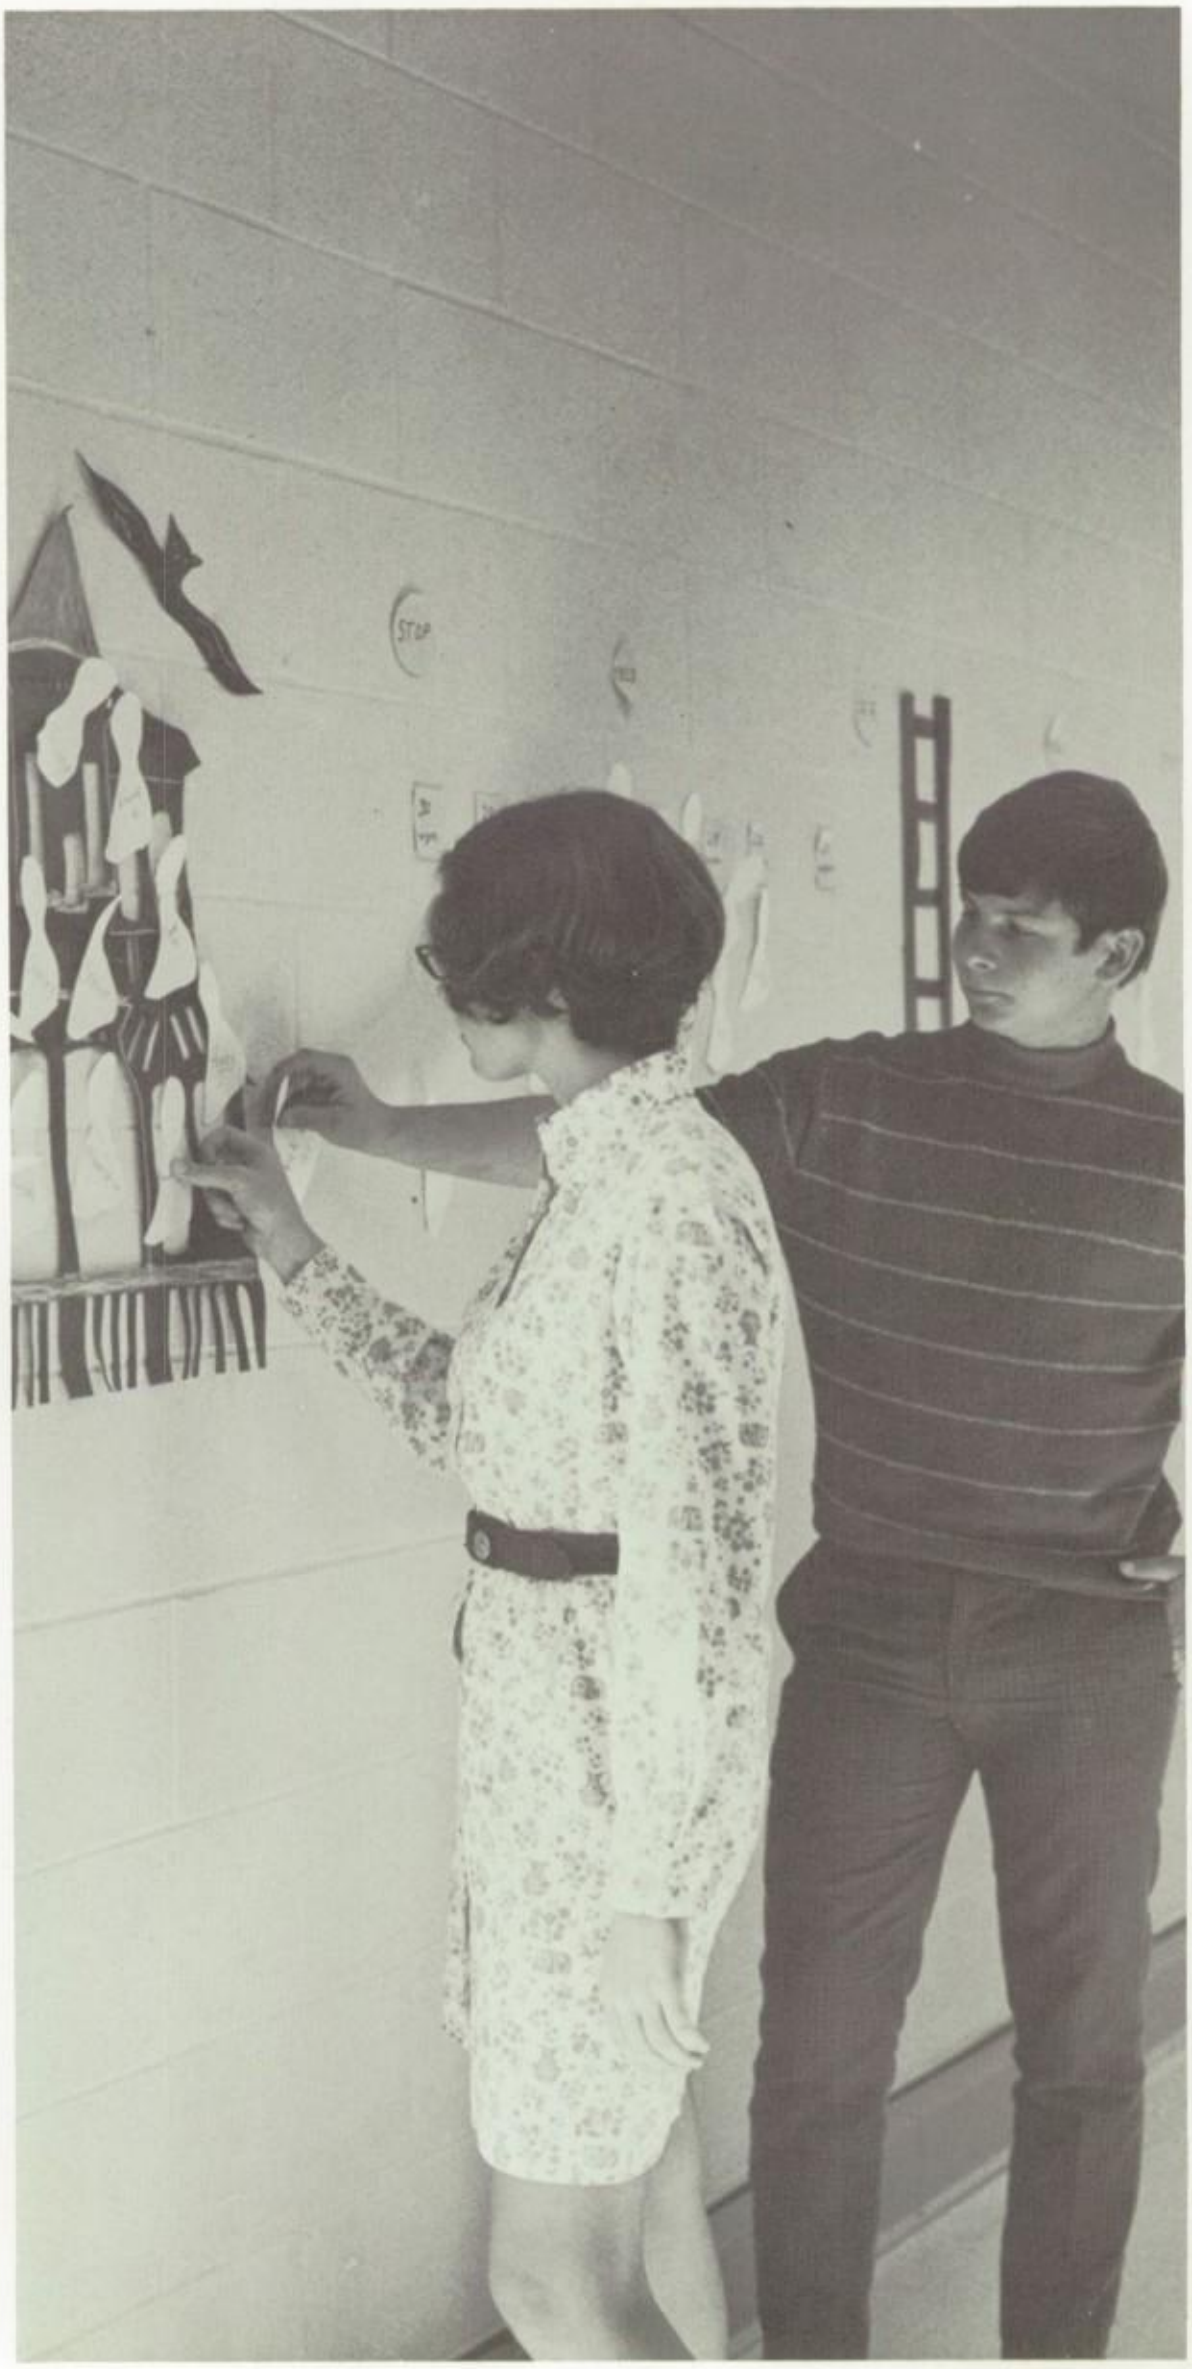
course gives students an over-all look at the business-minded world. Nearly every business topic, but typing is covered in this class. The students keep two week budget sheets that show them where their money goes and what it goes for. In general business, the writing of checks, completion of invoices and orders, filling out of receipts are skills that prepare the student for bookkeeping and many other business courses and jobs.

A knowledge of bookkeeping contributes to a person's understanding of economics, and competence in managing his personal business affairs. It prepares young people for successful participation in a variety of office and business occupations.



In typing, Becky Smith and Rick Wallace move to the haunted house as their typing speed increases.

Math, science enticed logical minds

Science and math work together to help us understand the world we live in. Complicated ideas may be expressed in equations using chemical and mathematical formulas that all understand easily.

Students of Westfield High get a general picture of math starting in junior high as they take seventh and eighth math courses along with general science, the basic fundamental courses.

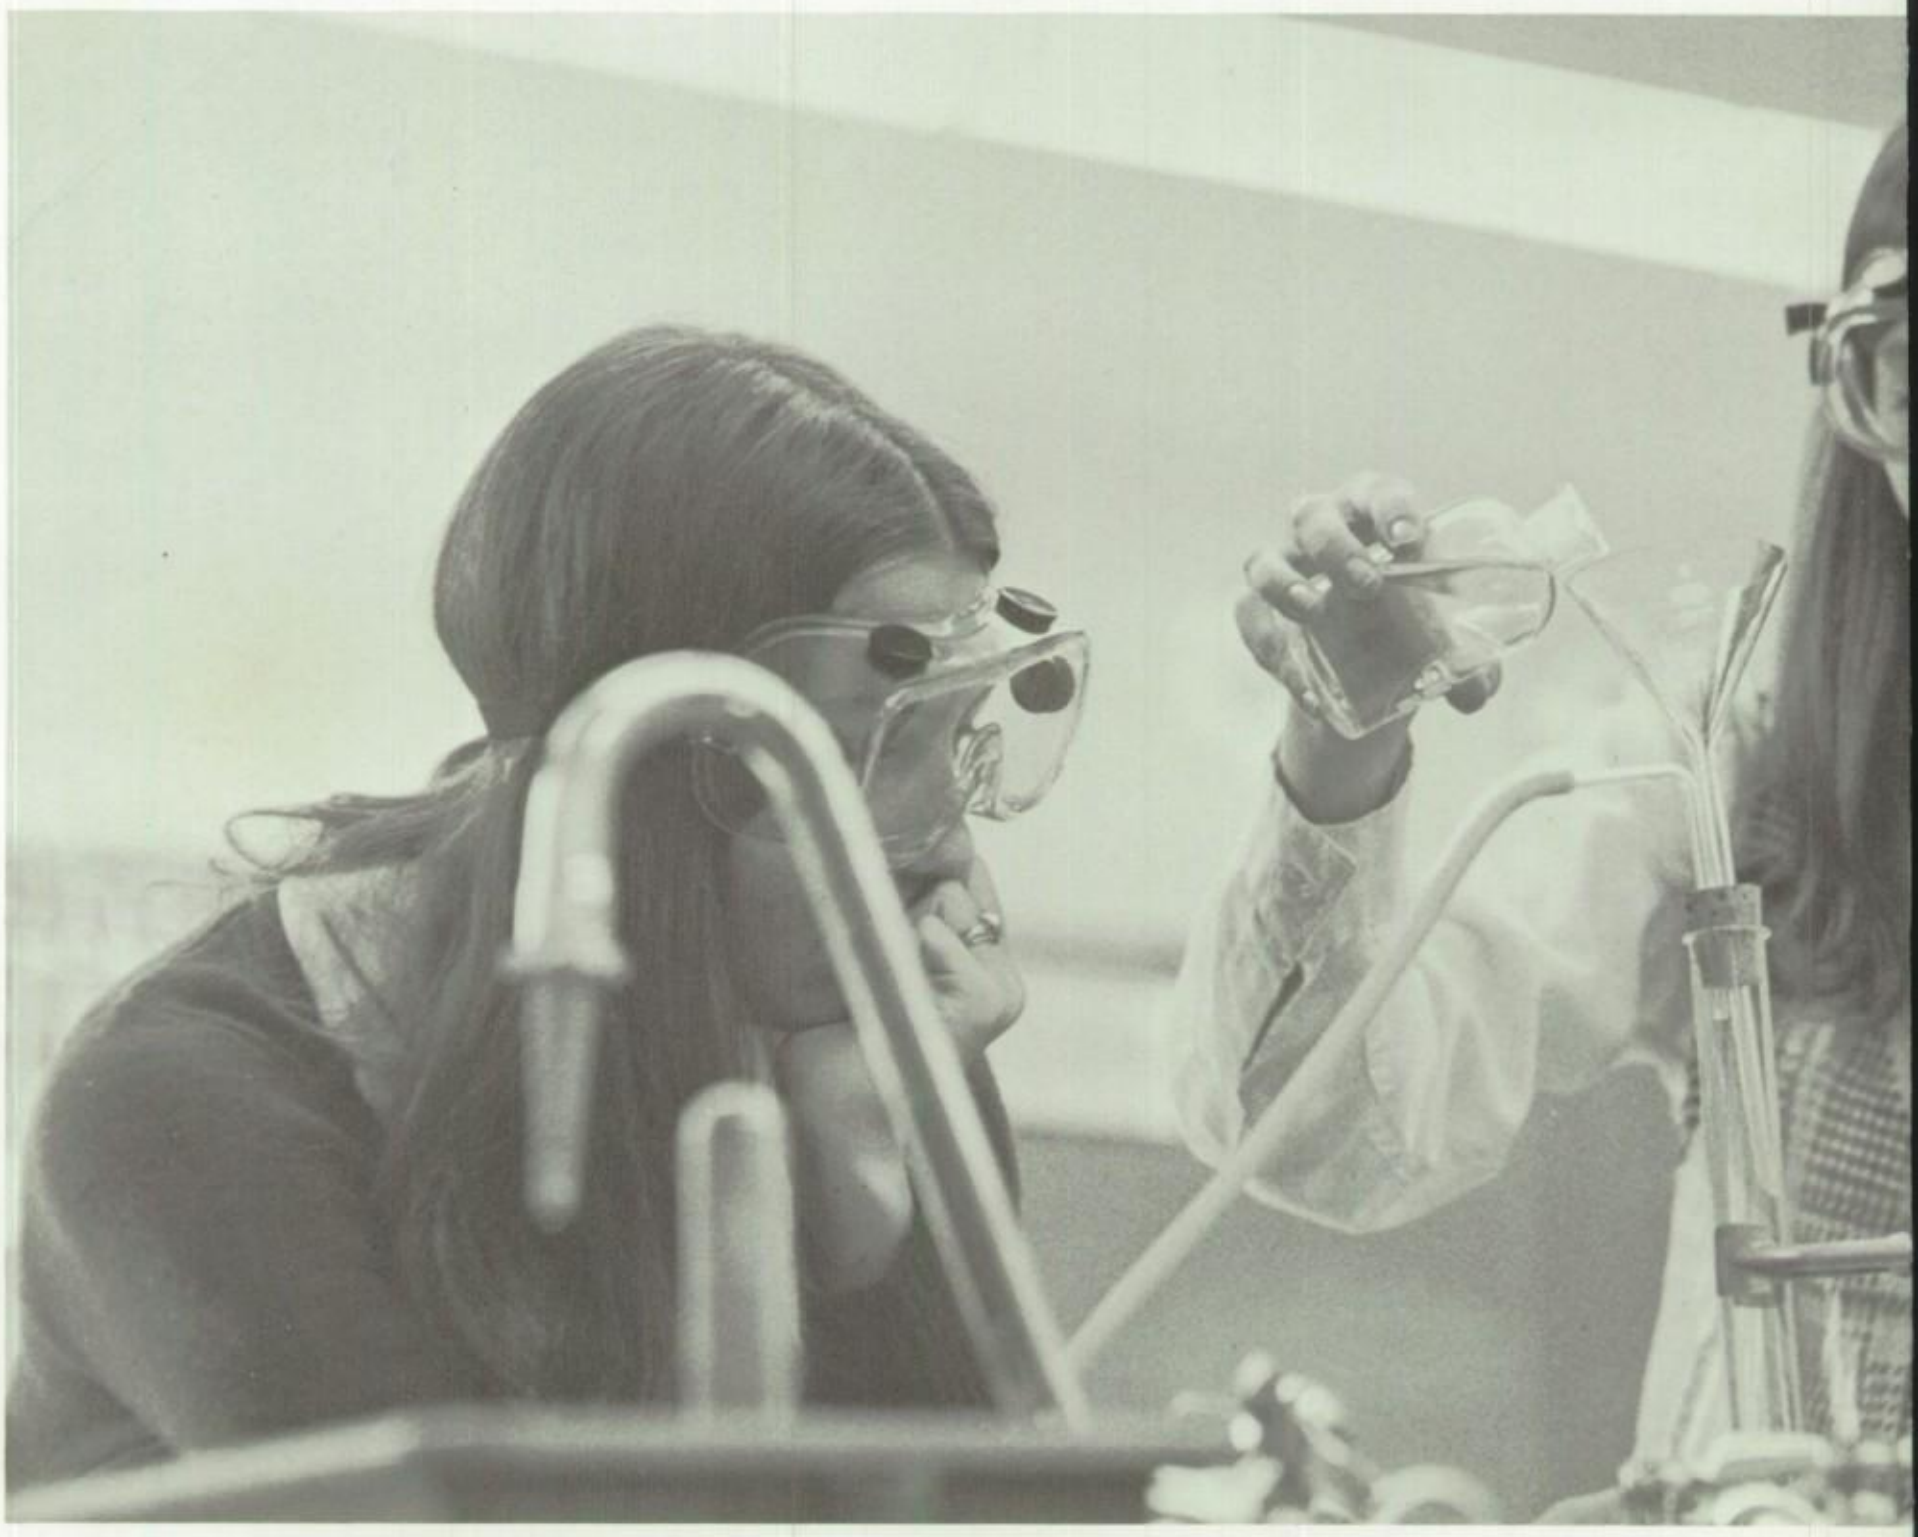
Up to date courses, such as narcotics, physiology and anatomy, and sex education help keep each student well informed about themselves and the changing world that goes on around them.

As sophomores, the students take biology, the study of living things. Here they compare the biological makeup of living creatures by dissecting and studying both charts and forms.

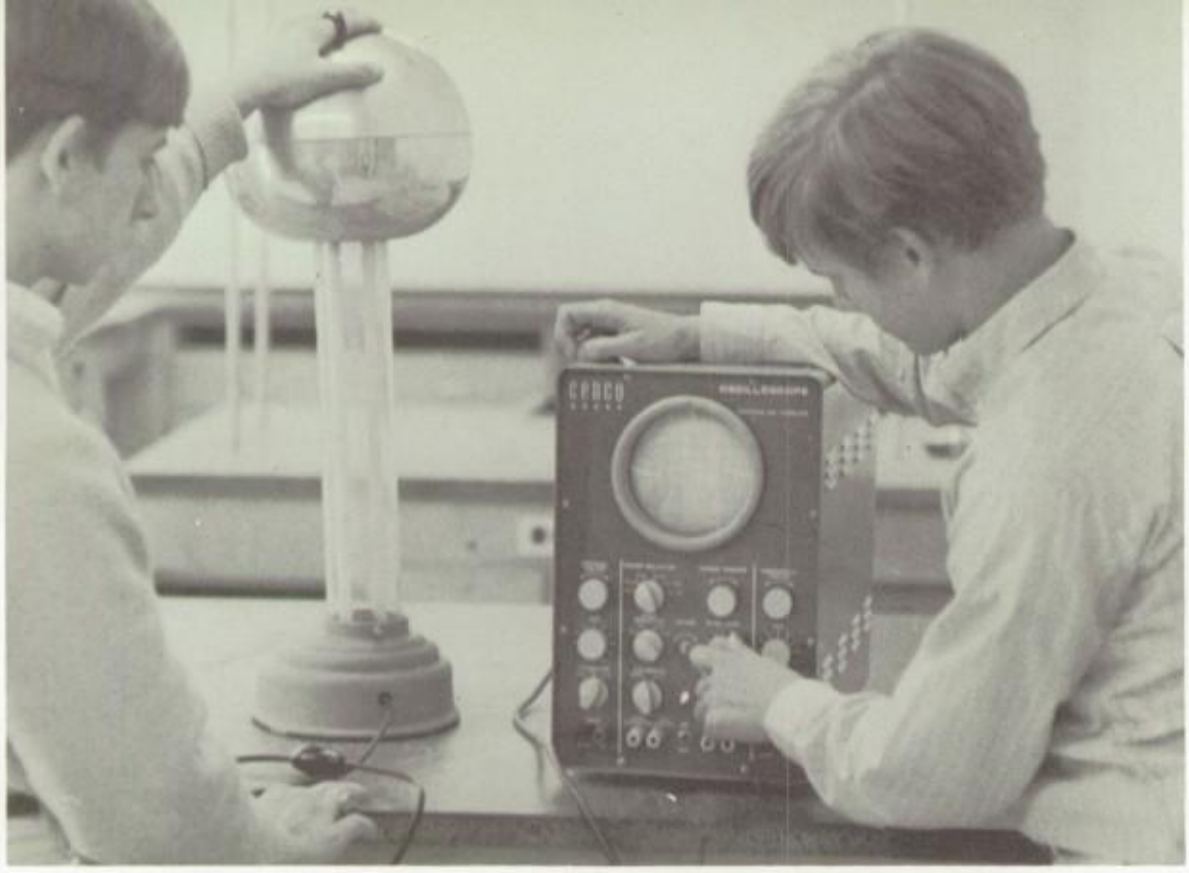
Those wishing to pursue a higher education in science may enroll in chemistry. In chemistry, the student takes part in many lab sessions which familiarize him with the equipment and help him understand the chemical composition of different substances. Physics is also offered as an advanced physical science course.

In math, students take the junior high modern math courses and then may advance to general math or algebra in their freshman year.

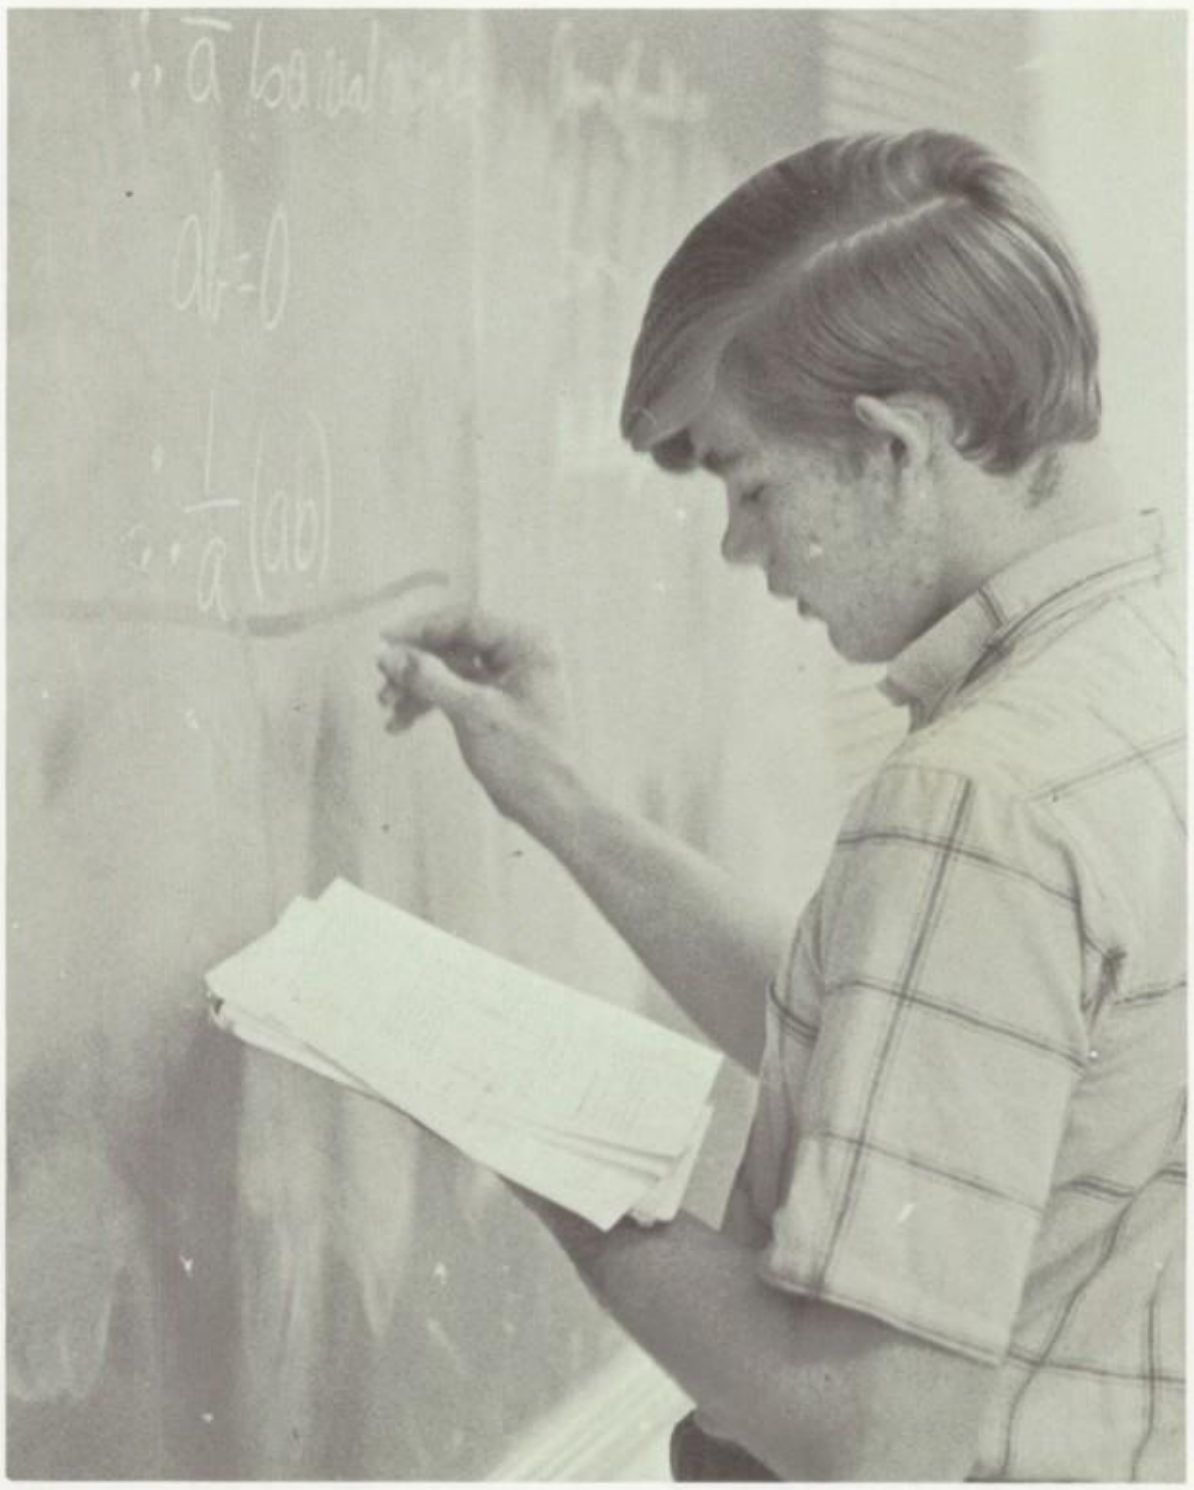
Geometry, another math course, helps the student understand plane figures as well as proofs. After taking geometry, students take Algebra III. This course is a continuation of Algebra I, dealing with more detail in mathematical proofs and procedures. Senior math, a more advanced course, is offered to those students who plan a college education or a future in the field of math.



Julie Duchene mixes some hydrochloric acid with zinc, while Pam Hollingsead studies the reaction closely.



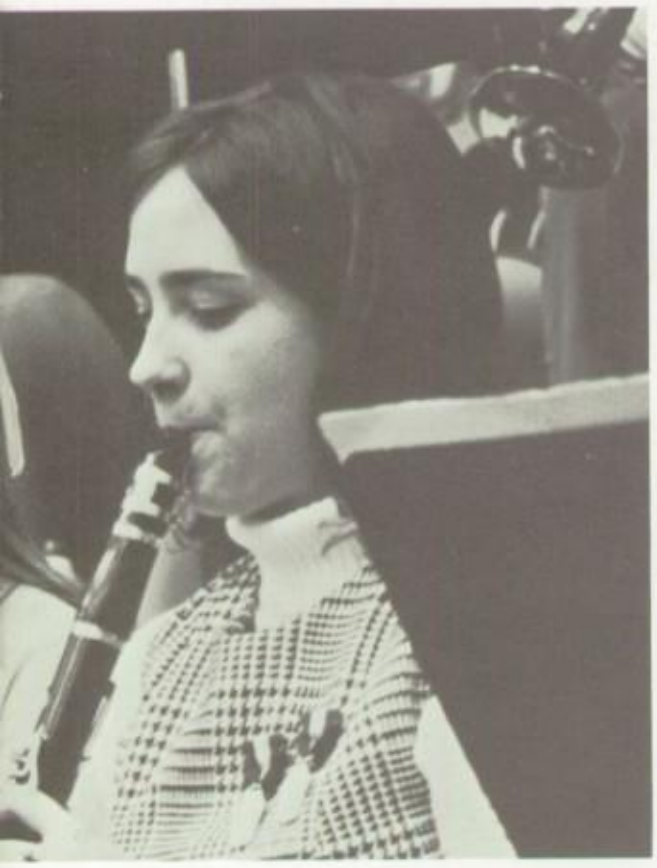
Seniors Bill Neiman and Mike Nevins adjust the physics' laboratory oscilloscope. Bill is measuring the fluctuations of a current while Mike looks on.

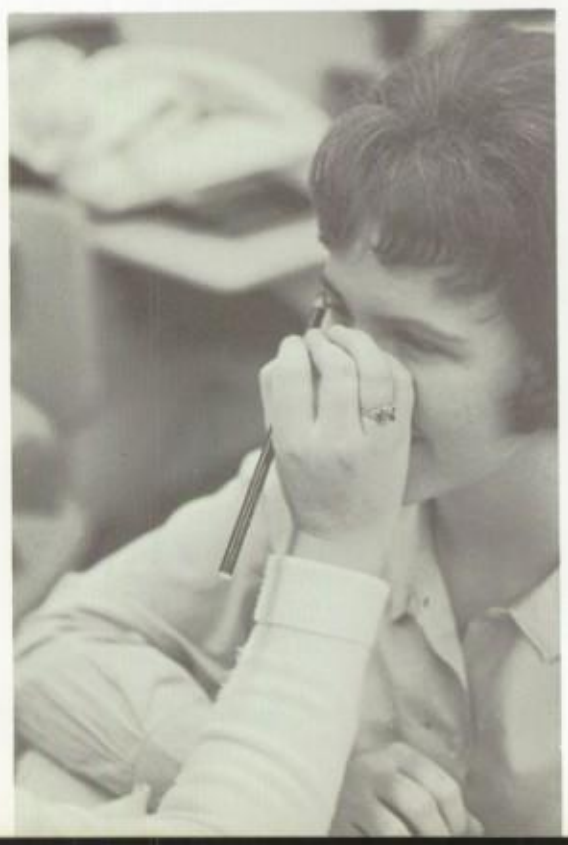


Jack Artman proves his math skill in algebra class by working out a proof for the other students. He uses axioms to prove his problem on the board.

Activities

Lee Everett, Cindy Bayt, and Denise Tirey play in the school band as one of their many extracurricular activities. Doug Arthur chats with a friend on the way home from basketball practice. Cathy Smith makes up Brenna Overman for the all-school play.





Ruth,

Let me take this opportunity to thank you for our many wonderful years of friendship. My other friends have changed, but you have remained constant. Undoubted our paths will divide after high school; going to different colleges, and later into different professions. However, I hope that we will always remain friends.

You have difficult years ahead of you. There may be times when you feel alone in a strange school or city. Always remember that you do truly have a friend in Jesus. Put your trust in Him; take your every problem to Him; He will never fail you. All things will work together for good, and you will be happier in Him than you would be in any other way. Whenever you need someone to talk to, He'll be there. He doesn't sign annuals or write you letters, but after you meet Him, He's more real to you than any human friend you have.

Luv, and more luv,
and more luv, and...

Student Council underwent changes

The Student Council underwent several major changes in the past year. The most noticeable change was in the organization of the Student Council. The Student Council is composed of three seperate councils; the executive council, the activities council, and the jr. high council. The executive council acted as a link between administration and students. The activities council had all jurisdiction over all extracurricular activities in the school. The responsibilities of the jr. high council was to take care of problems within the jr. high.

The National Thespians and National Honor Society are honoraries chartered throughout various high schools in the nation. Thespian Troupe 3119 has been in existance at Westfield High School for three years. The group honors students who have made significant contributions in the field of drama. Students accumulate points through work on plays until they reach ten, the minimum number needed for initiation. This year the group also entered a car in the homecoming parade and won first place.

The Honor Society recognizes those students who excell not only in the field of academic achievement, but also in the areas of service to the school and community, and leadership. The organization's two annual events are its induction ceremony which is open to other students and the community, and its banquet for members.

school news

Under the leadership of new sponsors, the newspaper was developed into an interesting publication. This year the journalism department was split into two divisions. The first-year students learned the necessary techniques in publishing a paper in a classroom environment. The second-year students were responsible for actual publication, but both classes solicited information. Mrs. Dawson directed the class, while Mrs. Codding sponsored the paper staff.

Using the adequate facilities, the annual staff worked hard to meet their deadlines. Busy with the compulsory tasks, the staff still managed to acquire pertinent school data. They worked many hours transforming the obtained information into the finished product. Their work included taking activity pictures, writing copy, making headlines and collecting ads. Their efforts have been well rewarded.

Clubs helped further personal interests

The Art Club helps to stimulate an individual's creative talents. It does this by offering members many types of art and providing them with the chance of trying them.

The Chess Club's purpose is to encourage interested students to develop their skills in this game. It also provides them with interesting entertainment. They are afforded the opportunity to play against other school club members.

The Girls 4-H Motto is, "to make the best better." They accomplish this by holding extensive classes during the summer to learn the skills of knitting, sewing, etc.

The Boys 4-H is run along the same ideals as the Girls 4-H. They are a service club and strive to better the community in which they live. They complete many worthwhile projects.

The Junior Historical Society has been an active club for many years. This year they have entered a new field. They worked with family trees. The club members learned many new ideas and made some progress.

The Sunshine Society has done an excellent job this year in bringing added joy and cheer to Westfield High School. They collected food for needy families at Christmas time. Decorating the teacher's lunch room was another way they spread happiness. They held the traditional Riley Fund drive to get money for the special Sunshine Room at Riley Children's Hospital. Around Halloween time, the club sold "Spook Insurance" to protect the community from soaped windows. They held a few bake sales to obtain money for their projects.

The Science Club's purpose has always been to create an interest in the exciting field of science. They have done a good job because there are many new members. They once again sponsored the annual science fair. All members had to submit an exhibit to remain active in the club and to go on the field trips. They took many field trips to interesting sites. All of the trips pertained to some aspect of science and all were educational. It is felt that much more informations can be obtained through observance.

Band members worked with the Student Council during the Sham "Rock " Festival, a successful venture.

Student director, Debbie Childers, worked hard in keeping the band together.

'Perfection' was the ultimate goal for the band and choir. With the beginning of school the band could often be seen marching up and down the football field preparing for the half-time performance. Cold weather brought them inside and their thoughts were turned to concentrating on music for the drill team during basketball. During Christmas the joint efforts of the band and chorus put together a holiday program entitled "A Christmasy Mood." The Silver Children also participated in the show. Practicing for contest and their annual Spring Concert kept the band and choir busy during the second semester, but they still managed to find a little time for money making projects and parties. All in all it was a most successful year.

Track team

Coach Leaman's cindermen compiled a 4-6 season record, in what was quoted by Coach Leaman as, "Mainly a rebuilding year. Most of the strength last year was in the distance events, but the sprints and field events look promising because most boys are underclassmen." Leaman was quoted as saying, "Al Estes was the most outstanding middle-distance runner in the history of Westfield High School." The team placed fifth in the county, and no school records were set during the course of the season. The team began their season off on the right foot with their season off on the right foot with a victory over Granville Wells, but dropped their next three meets to though they came back in the next one to defeat Deaf School. The team dropped their nest three meets to Marian-Adams, Lapel, and Avon, and then walloped Sharpsville Prairie 107-11. That brought up Windfall, and with that win, the team upped their record to 4-4. The last two meets of the season were lost to Conference rivals, Hamilton Heights and Hamilton Southeastern, as the team ended their season 4-6.

Summer sports schedule included golf

Golf can sometimes bring out the finesse in a person, as Bill Neiman demonstrates by delicately placing his ball on the green, after escaping from the sand trip.

and baseball

Golf and baseball were two of the sports that many Westfield athletes devoted themselves to during the summer. Many long hours of practice finally paid off when the day came for the golf meet or baseball game. True dedication is required for both the sports of golf and baseball; the individual must master his skills to such a degree to make himself competitive with all that he may meet in the regular course of competition. While golf depends mainly on a persons individual master of the game, baseball must stress the use of teamwork to pool all the resources to come up with the winning combination. Dedication to these principles of competition, team work and self-determination help in determining the eventual mental makeup of the person in later life.

Harriers had 4-6 year

Coach Joel Leaman's harriers compiled a 7-6 season in dual meet competition this year. During the course of the year the team defeated Sharpsville, Zionsville, Shortridge, Hamilton Heights, Sheridan, Deaf School, and Granville Wells. In addition the team captured the Mid-Capital Conference for the fourth year in a row, and placed third in the county meet. The Sectional meet found that Westfield had placed eighth among the twenty-six competing in the contest. Ken Hardin and Doug Arthur were the senior standouts on the team this year. Hardin finished second in the county and thirteenth among 148 in the Sectional, Arthur finished twenty-eighth.

The future looks bright for the harriers next year because this year's reserve team had an 11-2 season. They also placed first in the Mid-Capital Conference, and second in the County Meet. In the past seven years the cross-country teams of Westfield have amassed a 61-15 varsity record and a 49-21 reserve record. The future is further enhanced by the fact that there is much promise in the junior high.

Steve Stackhouse is one of the members of the Mr. Leaman's junior varsity that led the team to an 11-2 record for the year.

This year Westfield was under the direction of new head coach Ken Paxton and "Paxton's Pack", as they came to be known, compiled as 3-6-1 season.

The "Pack" faced Hamilton Heights and Franklin Central in the first two games of the season. The Shamrocks looked good in the season-opener against Hamilton Heights, and held the Huskies to seven points, the final tally found the Huskies on top by one point, 7-6. The next game saw the "Pack" go up against tough Marion county foe Franklin Central, and came away with a 44-0 defeat. The Shamrocks got their first taste of victory in the game with Thorntown. The next game was the Homecoming, and the Shamrocks and Deaf School battled to a 14-14 tie. The next week the team traveled to Frankfort, and handed the Prairie Dogs a crushing defeat. The next two games with Conference foes, Marion-Adams and Avon proved to be not worth the trip, for the Shamrocks were handed devastating defeats at the hands of both teams. The last two games of the season were at home, as the team lost to Taylor and closed out the season with a win over Ladoga.

The greatest part of the team this year was composed of seniors, in all there were 13 of them. The team also carried 7 juniors, 4 sophomores and a squad of freshmen. This season the team bettered their record by registering a 3-6-1 season. The seniors were Mike Nevins, Dave Nesbitt, Dave Mikesell, Dave Lewis, Don Burnell, Phil Barker, Bruce Beck, Doug Setters, Dennis Hittle, Steve Tyler, Ken Anderson, Ed Pickett, Dan Stevens.

This year the Westfield Shamrocks were characterized by many things. The Shamrocks were a tall team ranging from 6'1" to 6'4" in the backcourt, and speed was the prime quality of the front court men. The team was probably the most promising group of men since 1965 but the ability to put everything together during the same game was still lacking. Plagued with a short preparation time and a tough opening schedule, the Shamrocks started off slow. After five straight losses, the team pulled together and knocked off Clinton Central. Westfield, hosting its first Holiday Tourney still could not find the right combination, and they entered the second half of the season with a 1-9 record. Again the Shamrocks began with a slow start. They lost four straight games. After that the team began to click with two consecutive victories over Clinton Prairie and Windfall.

Varsity introduced new formations

During the week of June 1 to 6, 1969, Westfield's four varsity cheerleaders, Peggy Bluck, captain, Nancy Gilpin, Susan Norman and Jenny Hinshaw made a trip to Smith-Walbridge cheerleading camp in Syracuse, Indiana. The girls spent 5 days learning new cheers, practicing new formations, and meeting new friends. While participating in competition they received five ribbons; one first place, three second place, and one honorable mention.

Boosting spirit is the task of both freshman and B-team cheerleaders. Those girls who performed the task of leading the spirit for the underclass teams exhibited a great amount of school enthusiasm.

As Michael Whitesell, principal, and David Adams, superintendent, conversed, Mr. Whitesell noted the important parts of the discussion.

Mrs. Farmer, secretary to Mr. Whitesell, has many responsibilities including making up the daily announcements, keeping the teachers informed of late buses, and making the routine stay that way.

Even before school started, Mrs. Renihan was busy distributing books. During the year, she also kept records of the organizations' funds, money from ticket sales.

Mrs. Day worked in the bookstore and in the guidance office during the course of the year.

Mrs. Renihan was more to the students than just a bookstore attendant. Besides being school treasurer, she took charge of selling the athletic tickets. She always handled the sale of paper, pencils, rulers and other school supplies, quickly and efficiently. Students appreciated the warm and friendly smile that greeted them when they purchased a pencil between classes.

Mrs. Day's job as bookstore assistant was only a part-time task. She came to the rescue when Mr. Leaman needed a report typed immediately. Mrs. Day's duties also entailed working as a part-time nurse.

Mr. Davis was kept very busy this year as vice-principal. Not only was he in charge of student parking, but he also assumed the role of principal when Mr. Whitesell was absent. Sponsoring the Future Teachers, he tried to convey the rewards and perils of teaching to the interested members. The vice-principal also taught Drivers Education, Business Law, and courses in Retail Management. To start the day, he took attendance and made out passes for those who had been ill. All in all, he was a very busy man.

During the safety inspection, Mr. Davis checked the depth of the tread on Mike's car.

Besides her many duties, Mrs. Sweeney also tried to bridge the generation gap between teenagers and adults. She did this through teaching sociology and psychology, working actively as sponsor of the booster club, and always having a minute to chat with students.

Mrs. Castner administered first aid, and a lot of tender loving care to all students in the school system, not just the high school. She also gave the tine test to the seniors, and to the students who were new to the school, Her job was made easier through the assistance of two volunteers, Mrs. Whitmoyer and Mrs. Edwards.

Mr. Leaman's duties included administering the standardized test program, teaching the sophomore guidance class, and helping students choose their courses for the coming years. He also made visits to campuses around the state checking with recent graduates concerning their college life.

Mrs. Barbara Itce, high school librarian, had many duties, the least of which is checking out books for students like junior, David Whitmoyer.

Seniors anticipate jobs and college

The class of 1970 is a combination of many things. It consists of student leaders, athletic heroes, dramatic stars, oratorical geniuses, outstanding scholars, and a variety of many other types. Despite this variety of personalities, the senior class has managed to work together for 4 years. The highlight of this class was, ironically, as juniors when they sponsored the prom. The prom, through skill and determination, resulted in complete success and was hailed as one of the best ever.

Along came summer and class members had senior pictures taken, worked at many varied jobs, and partied. After the summer everyone was ready for his last year at Westfield High School.

The 69-70 year found the class active in nearly all the school organizations. The president of the student council was a senior; athletic teams were bolstered by the addition of seniors; the all-school play was dominated by seniors; leadership positions in many organizations were held by seniors.

But unfortunate experiences also plagued the class. Sickness put many of the students in bed for periods of up to four weeks.

Students knew graduation was nearing when they were measured for caps and gowns, ordered announcements, and selected senior keys. The second semester brought applications for schools and jobs; the prom this year, as guests, not workers; and finally the last round of tests; the senior banquet; baccaluareate; and finally, commencement marked the long trek on the pathway of life for the seniors.

Junior-Senior Prom was an underwater

Miss Debbie Stuart is overcome with joy as she is announced Queen of Atlantis. She was chosen among four seniors nominated by the junior and senior classes. As tears of joy rolled down Miss Stuart's face, she was crowned and awarded a dozen red roses to commemorate this occasion.

Peggy Duchene and Peggy Bluck discuss with their escorts Bob Robey and Willey Kinzer the unusual style with which the cafetorium was decorated.

The 1969 Junior Class set out in April to make the 1969 prom the best ever presented at Westfield High School. On May 10, the dreams of the Junior class came true. The doors of the cafetorium opened and the under sea world of Atlantis the Lost Continent was revisited. This being the first prom presented in the new high school many new innovations were tried. Colored lights above a false ceiling of colored paper gave the effect of being underwater while in the middle of the dance floor a fountain spurted water into a wishing pool. A catered smorgasbord highlighted the evening meal and the Vlasics provided music for dancing. After the dance and meal "Prudence and the Pill" was shown at the Carmel theater.

Scott Speigel and date Diane Alley join Dave Smith and Mike Nevins in selecting dinner from the vast selection of food prepared for the smorgasbord.

The Queen and her Court: Teresa Beck, Karen Short, Debbie Stuart, Joyce Jones.

The dance floor was a scene for constant excitement and enjoyment during Prom evening.

Innocent Wendy Pettijohn and Jim Peyton take chances standing in the hallway when the lunch bell rings.

Underclassmen play while they can

Sherry Conklin and Jim Peyton aren't impressed by senior Paul Martz.

Junior high students dance to the beat of "The Shy One's" at the canteen.

Heads swell as juniors won for fifth year

The junior float "Shamrocket to Victory" brought the homecoming float trophy back to the juniors for another year.

Advertising

Advertising for the Yearbook was an essential ingredient in its success. Here Ronnie Killen prepares a credit card at the Westfield Standard Service Station. Dan Stevens explains to Mr. Stevens, proprietor of the Dairy Queen in Westfield, a sample layout for an advertisement. Mike Pettijohn puts the finishing touches on a package of radio equipment from Citizen Ship Radio Corporation, a division of Curtis Dyna Products, Westfield.

Ruth,

Have a successful year in FTA next year. Don't cause too much trouble for the teachers, but manage to have all the fun possible. Congradulation on your successful speech + go on and try again next year.

We need more strong, ~~high ideals~~ leaders in the school like you!

The Best to the best.

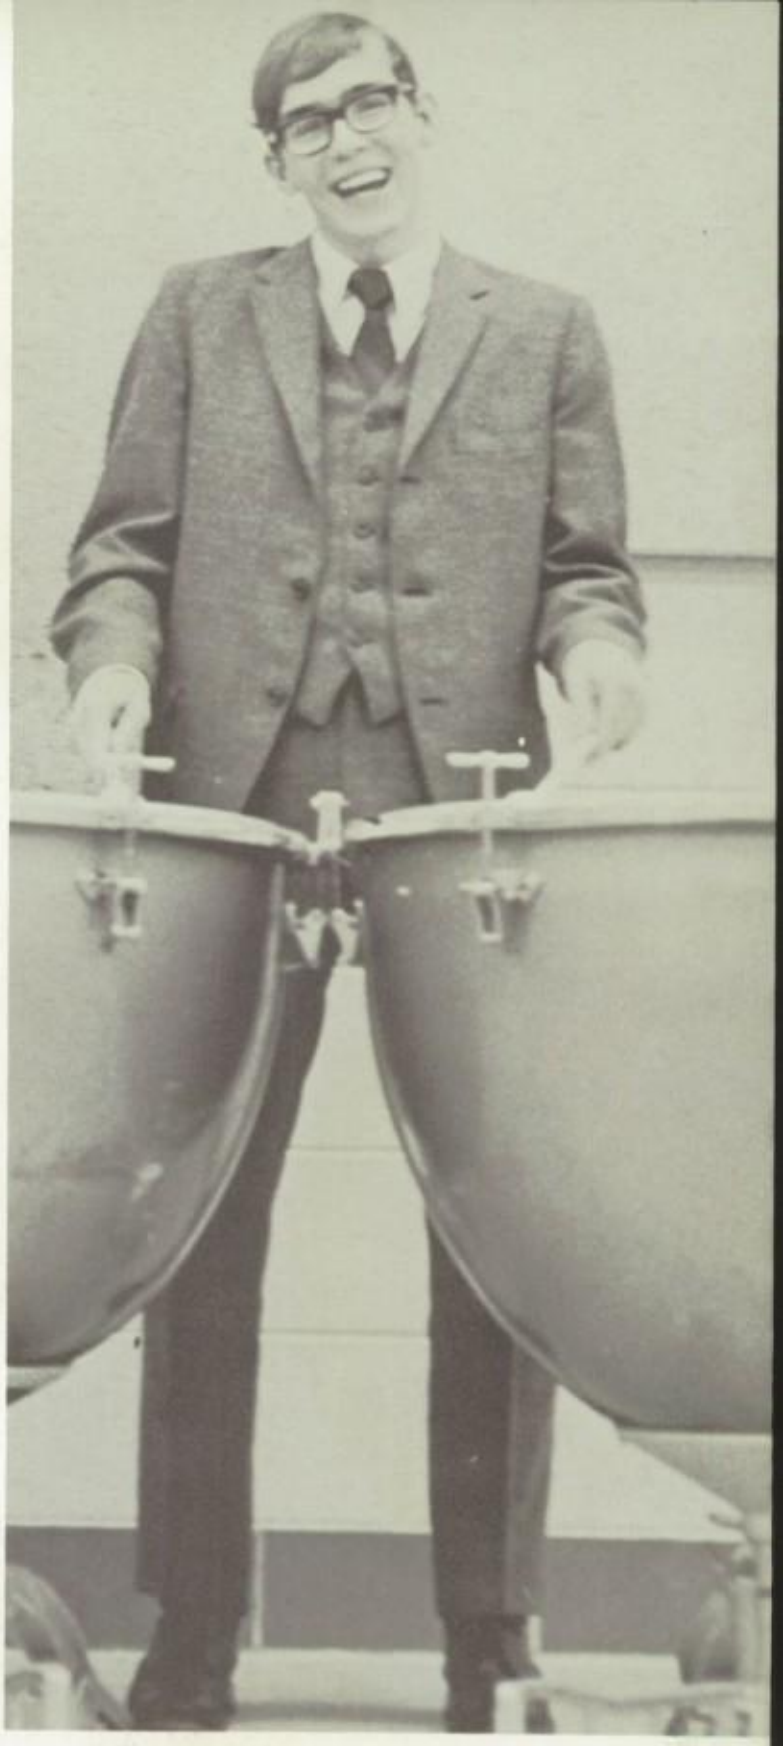
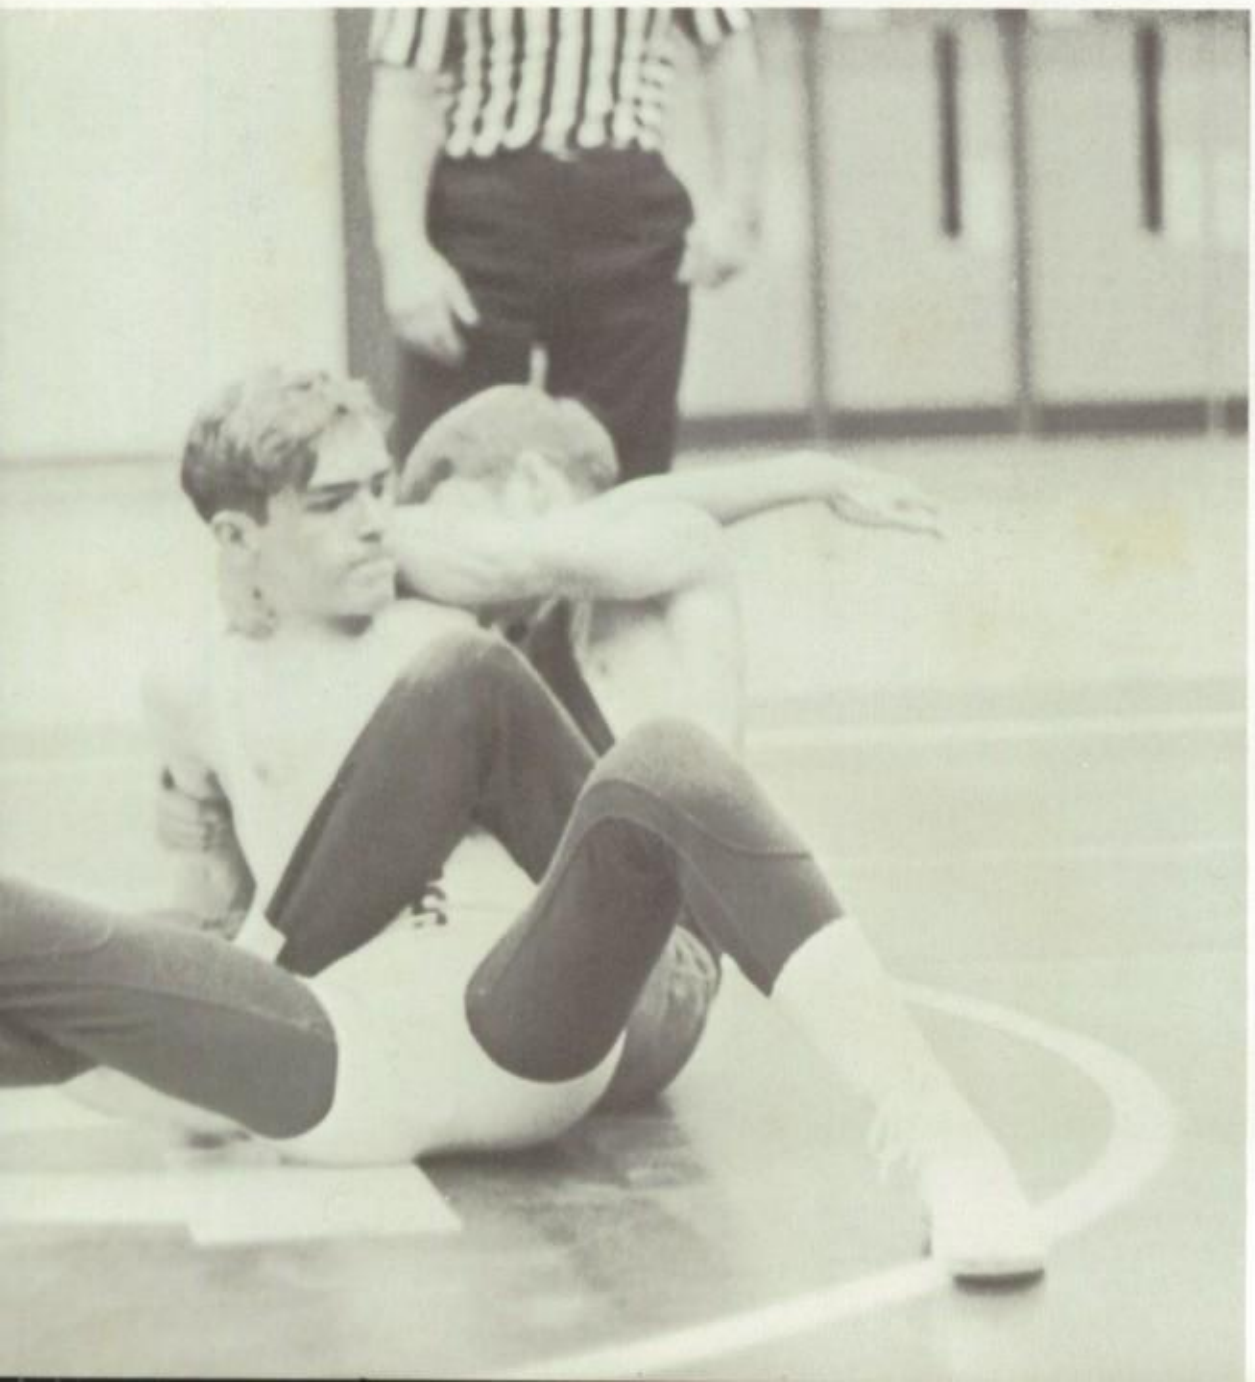
Traces of a friend





Larry Wayne Bastin

1952-1970

"No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main; if a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a promontory were as well as if a manor of thy friends or thine own were; any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

The story

Once upon a time there was a photographer who was asked to become the editor of a yearbook. He said "Why not?" and set out on his way to make a pictorial history of a school year out of hundreds of photographs yet to be taken, thousands of words yet to be written, and blank layout sheets yet to be filled. To accomplish this task he needed an able and competent staff. A staff of seventeen students was chosen. He also needed the advice and help of professional people. These were Larry Glaze of Paragon Yearbooks, Ed Bowers of Tower Studio, and Mrs. Beth Dawson of Westfield Washington High School.

As time progressed so did the yearbook. The spirit of the staff remained high, except during the moments of depression that accompanied the work as deadline dates rolled around. Miraculously the staff survived these moments through their sheer courage and the help of their advisers.

The sands of time sifted away until the final deadline was less than a week away. Whipped into action by the thought of the impending doom that would await them if the finals were not met; the staff slaved, sweated, prayed, and rushed to get their assignments finished.

During all this tumultuous action there were two staff members who remained silent and inactive. These dormant volcanos were the photographer turned editor and the associate editor. With forty-eight hours remaining before D-hour the editor said to the associate editor, "What are we going to try to capture this year?" The associate editor suggested a theme along the lines of the song TRACES. They both agreed that this was what they should try to capture – traces of a year gone by. A strange thing happened to them as they feverishly worked to find those important traces of memories that will forever remain locked in the student's minds; they discovered that there was more to capture of the year than just traces and memories of events gone by. Like thread left behind by a spelunker so that he might find his way out of a cave there was a slender filament of continuity left behind every student anywhere he went. The filament was a spirit only the young can know. A spirit of hope, joy, depression, fear, contentment, unfulfillment, promises, and of love. There was also, among a few, a daring to dream an impossible dream. We, the staff of the 1970 SHAMROCKET sincerely hope that we have captured that spirit from which the traces and memories of the year will flow forever as water bubbles from a spring.
